Jury Dooms Eklund In 'Sniper' Slaying After 5-Hour Debate

Slayer's Mother Collapses as Son Confronts Verdict, Pale but Calm

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

John Eugene Eklund, 26, last night was convicted of first-degree murder as Washington's sniper slayer. The penalty is death in the electric chair.

"He didn't do it I know he didn't do it!" sobbed Eklund's mother, clutching her throat while the jurors pronounced the doom of her son. She was carried away.

Eklund stood erect. As he listened to the verdict, a brick red flush spread from the base of his skull, livid against the pallor of his neck and face.

The 12 white men of the District Court jury took five hours and 20 minutes to make up their minds beyond a reasonable doubt that the tight-lipped former college boy and ex-convict killed Hylan McClaine, a 17-year-old colored boy with whom he had no quarrel. Eklund didn't even know him.

McClaine was murdered last October 15, the fourth man in Washington to fall before a midnight sniper who shot his quarry in the back. Two experts swore that the pistol that killed McClaine killed Theodore Goffney and Samuel Banks before him. Also shot in the back was Moe Steele, but the fatal bullets were not found. All the victims were colored.

Assistant District Attorneys John W. Fihelly and Charles B. Murray said Eklund was either a maniac or murderer moved by a "deep and bitter hatred of colored people." They produced an eyewitness who said Eklund killed McClaine, and bullets to show that his gun killed Banks and Goffney.

"Guilty as Indicted"

Justice James M. Proctor told the jurors that if they could make the Government's proof fit any conceivable theory of innocence they must set Eklund free.

The outcome, the justice said in concluding his 53-minute charge, could lawfully lead to only one of three verdicts, first-degree murder, second-degree murder or not guilty.

With these instructions, the jurors withdrew at 3:03 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

When they returned to report that Eklund must die, the 12 men's faces were drawn and haggard, and their teeth set.

Foreman Russell G. Wolfgram, of 3119 Twelfth Street Northeast, stepped forward with the indictment in his hand.

"Guilty as indicted," he told Clerk Samuel Silberman.

From the front row of the spectators' seats came a gasp. Mrs. Sadie Eklund, 2109 F Street Northwest, who was "absolutely confident" that her boy would go free, strained forward from the bench, trembling hands grasping her throat.

Horror and disbelief spread over her face, and tears glistened in her tired eyes, while Clerk Silberman inquired:

"Your foreman says your verdict is 'guilty as charged.' Is that your verdict?"

Eleven other heads bobbed, and

Vichy Expects to Fight British In Syria 'At Any Time Now'

Henry-Haye Says His Nation Desires Only Amity With U. S.

By Robert C. Albright

France desires the friendship of the United States but will fight to defend her territory wherever attacked, Gaston Henry-Haye, French Ambassador, told newsmen here yesterday.

The Ambassador replied to Secretary of State Hull's warning against French collaboration with Germany as the Vichy government issued a parallel statement.

The Vichy reply said this Government misunderstood France's needs in a difficult situation and asserted its present policy "is directed against nobody and harms the interest of no other power."

Neither Henry-Haye nor the Petain government's communique denied a measure of collaboration ex-

French Will Resist Without German Aid, Spokesman Asserts

By Herbert G. King
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, June 6.—The French government announced tonight, through its official military spokesman, that "we expect fighting to break out in Syria at any time now" but that formidable French defense forces stand ready to meet the British attack without German aid of any kind.

The announcement followed an "extremely important" two-hour session of the French cabinet and empire defense leaders, after which General Maxime Weygand, chief of overseas defenses, prepared to fly back to his general headquarters in Algiers to direct resistance.

The cabinet and military leaders, it was understood, studied means of sending reinforcements to Syria

Mock Blitzkrieg in Virginia Traps Entire 44th Division

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Bowling Green, Va., June 6.—Less than 24 hours after it began, the first mimic war in the Army's new maneuver area here was practically ended tonight, the big Forty-Fourth Division all but surrounded by a force one-third its size.

Lighting tactics, made possible by motorized infantry and horse cavalry, had the Blue Forty-Fourth early tonight faced by Red infantry in front, Red cavalry on its left flank and a strong Red force in its rear. In an effort to beat off this ominous threat, the Forty-Fourth tonight carried the battle desperately into the thickets tonight rushing troops from flank to rear, from front to flank, while the aggressive Reds pushed home their advantage.

This morning the Second Battalion of the Red Sixtieth Infantry, swept up the left flank of the Blue division, screened by the Third Cavalry from Fort Myer, Va. As it moved along in trucks collected from all units of the regiment, it gathered up Blue engineer detachments and security patrols, leaving the cavalry battling with the Blue main body.

At 2:45 p. m., the force crossed the Rappahannock at Port Royal, turned westward and sped 25 miles to Fredericksburg. There it was escorted through town by Virginia State troopers, crossed the river again and came down against the rear of the Blues. The battalion detrucked, fought its way south and east until Maj. Gen. Clifford R. Powell, commanding the Forty-fourth, had collected a battalion from his Eighty-seventh Brigade, thrown it across the path of the advancing Reds and sent in two additional companies to help. A dog fight developed, which raged in the darkness through the deep and

U. S. Hearing Expected to Ask Why 5-Cent Milk Plan Curdled

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Likelihood increased yesterday that the milk situation as a whole in Washington will be explored at a public hearing which is expected to be scheduled by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Adequacy of supply, producer and retail prices, nickel quarts for relief families and the feasibility of a penny-a-glass program in the schools—those are the principal issues.

That a hearing, preliminary to amendment of the Federal milk marketing order, will be called by Secretary Claude R. Wickard is virtually certain. Setting of the date awaits recommendation by O. M. Reed, chief of the dairy division, Surplus Marketing Administration. He had not taken such action yesterday.

Direct reasons for the milk "trial" would be the petition of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association for a cent-a-quart increase in the regulated prices paid farmers for fluid milk and formal requests of several local distributors to amend handling features of the marketing order.

Probable imminence of the hearing, combined with the fact that the agriculture appropriation bill for 1942 has not yet passed Congress,

Accusation, Not Denial

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, asserting flatly that Ambassador John G. Winant brought "not even a tenth cousin of a peace offer" from London, accused the German government yesterday of ordering American Nazis and advocates of appeasement to spread German propaganda stories in the United States.

Printed reports that Adolf Hitler laughs at the idea of invading the Western Hemisphere are plain Nazi propaganda ordered by Berlin, Mr. Roosevelt said.

Further, the German propaganda ministry told its American agents that when Winant arrived in the United States by air to see the President, a scarehead story should be spread that the British were all in and that the London government was talking peace, Mr. Roosevelt grimly told a press conference.

In dead earnest about spiking peace rumors that have run like wildfire through official and semi-official circles in Washington since Winant arrived last weekend, the President pointed to a wire basket on his desk and said it contained copies of two orders issued by the German government instructing Nazis and appeasers here to spread the propaganda.

Minces No Words

In fighting tones, Mr. Roosevelt said he had a pretty darn good idea of Nazi propaganda in this country, that he receives copies of German propaganda orders right along, but that he could not reveal how he obtains them without disclosing the source of his information.

The Chief Executive minced no words in accusing Germany of spreading the peace stories.

The President said he wanted it understood that he was not "denying" a story, because he said denials were an old vehicle used to give publicity to an original falsehood. On the contrary, he said he was accusing Germany of the overt act of using American agents to spread propaganda.

To make his accusation even more emphatic, the Chief Executive gave reporters the rarely granted permission to quote part of his remarks directly.

Accusation, Not Denial

"Not even a tenth cousin of a peace offer or anything like that or any discussion of peace" was brought to him by Ambassador Winant, the President said.

"Absolutely nothing like it," he added, authorizing the quotation "provided you use this not as a denial by the President but as an accusation by the President."

Saying he could tell the public everything about Winant's mission here, the President said that his en-

Dairy Walkout Deferred Pending More Negotiation

A walkout of 1,200 dairy employes, scheduled for midnight, was averted late yesterday when the union agreed to hold its strike order in abeyance pending further negotiations.

This was announced by John L. Connor, Labor Department conciliator, after a day of conferences with union and company officials. The strike would have affected 12 of the 13 Dairies which supply milk to the District.

Connor said he hoped an agreement on wages and working time, the only two remaining major issues, would be reached today or tomorrow. The companies have already agreed to a closed shop.

Any settlement of grievances would be retroactive to last midnight, when an old working contract expired, Connor said. "Much progress," he added, was made at yesterday's conferences.

Action of their negotiating committee in holding the walkout in abeyance was indorsed by some 900 members of the A. F. L. Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes Local 246 last night at a special meeting in Turner's Arena.

U.S. to Take Over Plane Plant Monday Unless Strike Ends; War Opened on Communists

Labor Chiefs Join Government Drive To Break Reds' Grip, Stop Arms Tie-ups

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Passage of a resolution yesterday in which an OPM labor advisory group comprised of C. I. O. and A. F. of L. leaders "unqualifiedly condemns and denounces" the three current West Coast defense strikes, marks the first phase of a war about to be declared by the unions and the Government to publicly expose Communist labor leaders and oust them from control.

This was learned yesterday from informed sources who said the Administration and the unions had agreed that the time for words and resolutions was past and that action of a decisive and determined nature must be taken immediately.

This action, which will crystallize soon—perhaps today—will be directed first against the three "outlaw" strikes, disavowed and condemned by national C. I. O. and A. F. of L. presidents and officers, and which the Government is convinced, are led by Communists, Communist sympathizers and fellow travelers.

To Call a Red a Red

Significantly, in this war for labor peace the Government is apparently prepared, for the first time, to call a spade a spade and a red a red.

The strikes condemned:

1. The work stoppage since May 9 of 20,000 loggers in the Puget Sound, Wash., area, called by the C. I. O. International Woodworkers of America, whose leaders rejected a Defense Mediation Board settlement, denounced the board and have refused to heed the vehement demand of C. I. O. President Philip Murray on Thursday night to return to work.

2. The four-week strike of 2,000 A. F. of L. machinists in 11 San Francisco Bay shipyards, characterized by A. F. of L. President William Green as an "outlaw" movement, but nonetheless crippling production of more than $500,000,000 in Navy orders.

3. The sudden walkout early Thursday, while Mediation Board conferences were underway, of 9,000 C. I. O. United Auto Workers employed at the North American Aviation Co., Inglewood, Calif., holding up almost $200,000,000 of British and American orders for planes.

The exact nature of the prospective action could not be determined precisely, but it is thought that it will begin with the national officers of the two labor organizations, supported by the OPM, Mediation Board and other Government agencies, "moving in" on, and thereupon "moving out" the left wing leaders.

Steps from the White House in this program are also anticipated. At his press conference yesterday

Weekend Will Be Fair and Warm, Then—More Rain

Washington, glad of the sunshine yesterday, will have fair and warmer weather today, with a maximum temperature of 86, the United States Weather Bureau predicted. The maximum temperature yesterday was 81.

More rain is in the offing, however. The Weather Bureau's extended forecast to and including Wednesday said: "Fair weather until Sunday afternoon or night, when showers will begin, with occasional showers thereafter until about Tuesday night. The total amount will be heavy in most sections. Warmer Saturday, and temperature will likely continue above normal until Tuesday night or Wednesday, when cooler weather is indicated."

The report embraced the Middle Atlantic States, including the District, Maryland and Virginia.

Meanwhile, the drought, abated in the Northeastern United States, continues in the southeast. Unless rains—which were not expected—improve the hydro-power situation in the Southeast, strict rationing of industrial current will be instituted at 6 a. m. June 16 by five major power companies, the Associated Press reported.

Owners Hint They'll Accept OPM Coal Plan

Southern Operators To Reply Monday On $7 Wage Scale

By the Associated Press

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 6.—Guarded hints of possible acceptance followed today the National Mediation Board's proposal that there be a $7 daily wage throughout the Appalachian fields, although all the Southern coal men would say openly was that an answer will be framed by Monday.

Upon the decision of the Southern operators, on the labor peace formula calling for elimination of the long-argued 40-cent wage differential between North and South, possibly hinged another bituminous shutdown.

None of the leaders here attending a district meeting would make a forecast, other than to say there was no division of opinion, but one highly placed Charleston source expressed the belief that "there can be no stoppage of work" because of the defense situation.

Proposal "Very Depressing"

At a similar coal meeting in Cincinnati, Ohio, a spokesman termed the mediation board's peace recommendations "very depressing to us." He added that "I don't know where we are going to land."

A coal field leader here said Southern operators felt themselves to be "up a tree." He asserted that "I don't know what they can do except take their medicine or the mines will be closed."

L. Ebersole Gaines of Fayetteville, W. Va., head of the Southern Operators' Negotiating Committee which has battled for months to retain the wage differential, announced that a meeting of coal men will be held in Washington tomorrow or Monday to make a decision. He said he could not say what it would be.

L. T. Putman of Beckley, W. Va., also a member of the negotiating committee, joined Gaines in explaining the "present situation" to 99 operators gathered here for a meeting of low volatile operators of District No. 7 who chose directors for the next two years of operation of the Bituminous Coal Act.

President Roosevelt yesterday signed the bill authorizing requisitioning by the Government of all foreign merchant ships lying idle in American harbors, and immediately thereafter issued an executive order empowering the Maritime Commission to take over such vessels and operate or otherwise dispose of them in the interest of nationanl defense.

The Maritime Commission in turn began steps to commandeer and allocate to services "which will be the most useful in the interests of national defense," 84 vessels with a total tonnage of 459,140, of the following nationalities:

Danish, 39 vessels of 140,871 tons; German, 2 vessels of 8,999 tons; Italian, 28 vessels of 168,74 tons; Estonian, 2 vessels of 3,837 tons; French, 11 vessels (including the Normandie) of 131,939 tons; Lithuanian, 1 vessel of 1,255 tons; Rumanian, one vessel of 3,495 tons.

Forms to Be Drawn Up

The ships subject to seizure are only those technically "laid up" in waters under the jurisdiction of the United States, including the Philippine Islands and the Canal Zone. They do not necessarily include all foreign ships now in American harbors, some of which have been here for some time but still are not considered "idle." The number, therefore, may be increased in time.

Most of those subject to seizure already have been taken into "protective custody" by the United States Coast Guard. The main

Probers Told Pepper Put 'Heat' On in Airfield Job Bidding

By the Associated Press

A Work Projects Administration official acknowledged yesterday that it was at the instance of Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, that a compromise was worked out recently on asphalt purchases for the construction of runways at Eglin Field, Fla., an Air Corps project.

Questioned by Chairman Harter (Democrat), of Ohio, of a House Military Subcommittee, Chief WPA Engineer Perry A. Fellows denied, however, that there had been any unavoidable delay in placing an order with the low bidder for the needed 3,600,000 gallons of asphalt.

Fellows said Thursday that although he believed the low bidder was Allied Materials, Inc., Atlanta, he and others involved effected a compromise to purchase 1,800,000 gallons from Pan American in order to avoid a lawsuit by Pan American Petroleum Corporation, another bidder.

"The matter of working out the compromise," asked Harter, "was at the instance of certain men in public life here in Washington, wasn't it?"

"Now if I can state it in my own words—," Fellows began.

But Harter interrupted and insisted on a direct reply.

"Yes, sir, I think so," the engineer said.

"Who was that man?"

North American Aviation Factory Has $196,000,000 In Defense Orders

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

The Government is preparing to take over the strike-bound plant of the North American Aviation Co., at Inglewood, Calif., if C. I. O. strikers there have not returned to their jobs by Monday, it was learned last night.

Action for seizure of the big plane factory immediately by Presidential proclamation was strongly urged yesterday by some high defense officials, but others brought about a delay in hopes that agreement could be reached to resume production Monday.

Meanwhile, at Inglewood, Richard T. Frankensteen, head of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers aviation division, conferred for hours last night with union officials, endeavoring to effect a settlement, but the conference had to be adjourned until today. At the same time a mass meeting of the strikers was called for tomorrow, the Associated Press reported, presumably to hear a report on today's negotiations.

If Frankensteen is unable to announce a settlement by that time, it was made clear here, the Government is prepared to step in.

Defense officials here are said to be counting on Frankensteen, who flew to Inglewood yesterday, to induce the strikers to go back to their jobs in compliance with their promise not to strike while Defense Mediation Board conferences on the controversy were being held here.

Huge Orders Tied Up

The strike, tying up $196,000,000 worth of military planes for the Government and throwing 11,500 workers out of employment, was called suddenly Thursday morning despite the fact that the board was actively negotiating with representatives of the union and of the company.

To the natural question of how the Government could compel the strikers to work, or obtain labor to operate the plant once it is taken over, officials here were silent, but they made it plain that a plan had been worked out, else the taking over of the factory would not have been considered. There was talk that Army or Navy officers would be placed in charge and the workers be called on not to attempt to strike against the Government. Legal grounds for the action were said to be under study.

These developments came as Washington read with interest assertions by Virginio Gayda, Fascist Italy's leading commentator, that American strikes mark the first phase of civil war which he said would break national unity and threaten "the fortune and prosperity of the United States."

Gayda cited the North American strike specifically and pointed to

Labor Joins Drive to End Defense Strikes

President Roosevelt indicated that he is considering methods by which the Government would crack down on the recalcitrant strikers, but he would not indicate what the methods might be. Asked if he was considering anything to make labor aware of its "new responsibilities" under the emergency, the President said that reporters could assume such was the case.

Questioned specifically about action on the North American and lumber workers' strikes, Mr. Roosevelt indicated that he would wait for word from the Mediation Board and said that he would have no statement on the matter today, emphasizing the word "today."

A clear indication that the C. I. O., at least, has joined the issue of a battle with its own left wing, was seen in the scorching blast issued by Murray Thursday night condeming O. M. Orton, lumber workers union president, for refusing to comply with a Mediation Board settlement proposal.

Orton is known to the Government as having some Communist connections and as the head of a "red wing" in the union. Contrary to promises made to the Mediation Board on Wednesday that he would discuss the back-to-work proposal with union members in Seattle, Orton is still registered at a hotel here. He could not be reached last night for comment.

A probable move of Murray to end the strikes, affecting about 50 operations in the Puget Sound area, will be to send C. I. O. officials to the scene and meet with union members on their own grounds, in an attempt to break the "red wing" leadership.

The North American strike was called Thursday, with the principal union leader on the scene being Wyndam Mortimer, characterized by Government officials close to the labor situation as a "close follower of the Communist Party line, if not a member."

Admitted Communist Involved

The workers on the scene, it was believed, were told by their negotiators in Washington that the Mediation Board was "stalling." Included in the negotiators was Elmer Freitag, president of the striking local, who admitted a week ago here that he was a registered Communist Party voter in the 1938 California elections.

The San Francisco machinists' strike depends for solution, it was indicated, not only on the breaking of a Communist-led local, but on political factors involving the leadership of the International Association of Machinists by its president, Harvey W. Brown.

The striking local is led by Harry Hook, known to the Government as a Communist or fellow traveler, and with a "comradely" relation to Harry Bridges, Left Wing C. I. O. West Coast maritime labor leader. Hook's local, although an A. F. of L. organization, is also a member of a C. I. O. maritime labor federation.

Hook was a signatory to the master contract for West Coast shipbuilding labor, whose "no strike" clause is now being violated. Brown is a member of the national shipbuilding stabilization conference, responsible for the master contract.

Although Brown has urged the machinists to go back to work, he has so far refused to discipline the local against the threat that in so doing he will lose the local to the C.I.O. and perhaps even lose control of the international union.

May Have To Act

Defense officials, however, believe that Brown must take the step, regardless of the consequences.

Many labor, defense and even union leaders are convinced that the continuance of two of the strikes, and the sudden declaration of the North American stoppage, in violation of a promise, are the result not of desires to achieve workers' legitimate demands, but to cause disruption for its own sake and to injure national defense.

They point out that Left Wing leaders are completely aware of the fact that such strikes will drive support to the side of the most reactionary and least labor-friendly members of Congress, with the result that legislation may be passed so restrictive that workers' morale will be shattered and production paralyzed.

Complete unanimity and considerable vehemence on the point that the great majority of leaders of both labor unions are determined to rid their ranks of subversive leaders was demonstrated at the meeting yesterday of the OPM labor policy advisory committee, it was learned.

The committee's resolution, it was believed, was issued primarily to mark the start of the campaign. It was signed by 12 of the committee's 16 members, all those present in the city. Absent, among others, was Brown.

For the same purpose—to indicate general support by the majority of labor of the President's emergency objectives—it was thought that Mr. Roosevelt yesterday made public a letter received from Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers (A. F. of L.).

Reporters, leaving the President's press conference, were called back by Mr. Roosevelt who said he wanted to make known the fact that he had recently received from 400 to 500 letters and resolutions expressing support.

Tobin's letter, he said, could be taken as a sample because it so well expressed the point of view.

Ford Official Accuses Union Of Slowdown

By the United Press

Detroit, June 6.—A spokesman for the Ford Motor Co. said tonight that a slow-down strike was in progress on the Ford Motor assembly line at the River Rouge plant and that, as a result, assembly of automobiles and trucks at River Rouge and 14 branch plants would be impossible tomorrow.

A spokesman in the Ford production office said the slow-down had been ordered by the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) which currently is negotiating a contract with Ford.

A. U. A. W.-C. I. O. spokesman said the slow-down charge was a "surprise" to union officials. He said they were working as fast as possible to complete a contract "so we can have satisfactory relations in the plant."

The Ford spokesman said the slow-down had been ordered because production scheduled in the forthcoming contract would be based on work now being done and that an increase of output in the future would call for hiring of more men.

The motor shortage, developing in the last two weeks, caused nine branch plants to close last Monday and two more on Thursday, it was said. Ever since a strike at Ford's Detroit plants two months ago, production lines have been running six days a week in an attempt to make up for the eight production days lost.

The Ford production office reported that the River Rouge and other assembly plants would resume automobile output Monday. Other plant operations will remain "practically full," it said.

Strikes Are First Phase of Civil War In U.S., Says Gayda

Rome, June 6 (AP).—American strikes were held up today by Virginio Gayda, Fascism's No. 1 editorial commentator, as the first phase of civil war which, he said, would break national unity and threaten "the fortune and prosperity of the United States."

Gayda cited the new strike of the North American Aviation Corporation, saying it "retards execution of orders made by the governments of the United States and Britain to the value of $196,000,000."

He said 2,253,216 man working days had been lost in defense industries since January 1 as a result of strikes, adding:

"Thus the North American war plan enters history with the advance guard of national civil war which divides the American people from the Government and workers from the capitalists and loses national unity in a fatal clash of feelings and interests, not without danger to the fortune and prosperity of the United States."

Ship Seizures May Ease Oil Shortage

By the Associated Press

Possibility of a partial easement of the threatening oil shortage in the East was seen in informed quarters yesterday in the forthcoming requisitioning of foreign ships in American ports.

Secretary Ickes, the defense petroleum administrator, made immediate representations to the Maritime Commission to determine how many of the foreign vessels to be taken over would be available to move oil.

It was understood the foreign ships idle in American ports included eight tankers, of German, Italian, Danish and French registry.

However, if all these tankers were put to moving petroleum from the Gulf of Mexico to the Eastern Seaboard, there would be only partial relief of the expected shortage, as a committee of the oil industry estimates the present tanker deficiency as 49 vessels.

Ickes has said the populous East may be called on, within a month, to forego the use of automobiles for pleasure, both on weekends and Sundays.

Secretary Ickes telegraphed Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois that "it is imperative" that Illinois enact a petroleum conservation law so that it could participate in the interstate compact for oil conservation. A bill introduced in the Illinois legislature to set up a conservation program failed of passage.

A spokesman for the Interior Department said Ickes also probably would make new efforts to bring California into the interstate compact, under which big oil producing states prorate production among participating states.

steps to be taken now by the Maritime Commission, therefore, are to draw up the necessary legal forms, to fix the terms of the requisitioning, including compensation, and to determine the disposition to be made of the ships.

Defiance of Axis

By his order the President authorized the Maritime Commission to operate any or all of such vessels, either directly or by agent, in the service of the United States or in any commerce, foreign or coastwise; to charter or lease any or all of them to any person for operation in similar service, provided that none should be transferred, chartered or leased to a belligerent government without his (the President's) later specific approval; to document any or all of the ships under the laws of the United States or any neutral country of the Western Hemisphere; to make any other disposition of them as the President may hereafter direct and to repair, equip, man, or do whatever else may be necessary to accomplish the purposes of the act or order.

The Capital thought it significant that the President's order gave specific authority to document the vessels under the laws of any neutral country in the Western Hemisphere. Speculation centered immediately around the possibility that some of the ships might be transferred to the registry of certain Latin American countries for service in the North Atlantic between the United States and Great Britain, an area from which United States merchantmen are barred under the Neutrality Act.

The President's orders was also considered another act of defiance of the Axis powers and their threats. German and Italian sources repeatedly have referred to the possibility of just such a seizure as the President ordered, and emphasized that the act would be considered by them as hostile.

However, the President declined to go as far as he is permitted under the act when he placed his own limitation upon the transfer seizure of ships from one belligerent flag without his specific approval. The question of preventing the seizure of ships from one belligerent and their transfer directly to the flag of an adversary was debated during consideration of the ship-requisitioning bill. It was rejected in favor of a clause which prevented the transfer of a ship from one belligerent government to another—a clause which was considered meaningless because none of the ships was owned by a government at the time the legislation was introduced.

Roosevelt Lays Peace Rumors to Nazis

voy to London had a twofold purpose in returning.

The purpose was, first to report on 25 or 50 major topics relating to conduct of the war in Great Britain, said Mr. Roosevelt; secondly, to obtain here information on 25 or 50 subjects to take back to London.

That is all the President would tell of what Winant has been doing in the conferences he has held with Mr. Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull, Lease-Lend Supervisor Harry L. Hopkins and other high officials.

Veteran newsmen could not remember when the President has more bluntly accused a foreign government of an unfriendly act than in his charge yesterday that the German propaganda ministry was spreading falsehoods here.

The President based his accusation on news stories, interviews and columns that he has read in the newspapers during the past week.

He was not talking about all newspapers, the President said, but only about certain types in whose columns there has occurred an amazing coincidence.

This amazing coincidence, he said, was that copies of the German propaganda orders to American agents came into his hands at the same time that stories appeared in the press about weakening British resistance, about peace talk in London and about Hitler's ridiculing the idea of invading the Western Hemisphere.

The President said that just as Winant arrived in the United States the White House obtained copies of two orders issued—not to the people in Berlin or Europe—but to Nazis in the United States and people here in favor of appeasement.

These orders came from Germany, Mr. Roosevelt said without qualification.

The President said he gets copies of such documents right along, that the two he was referring to were in a basket on his large desk.

He said reporters should not ask him how he gets the documents, but he could assure the public that he has a pretty darn good idea of German propaganda in this country.

The two memoranda he was talking about relate to two types of propaganda Germany was asking its agents to play up here, Mr. Roosevelt said.

The first type was that Germany has no thought of invading the Western Hemisphere.

Quotes Editorial

The President said he was talking about an interview with Adolf Hitler published yesterday in Life Magazine, the New York Times and other newspapers. John Cudahy, former United States Ambassador to Belgium, who obtained the interview, quoted Hitler as saying that the idea of a German invasion of the United States was silly and fantastic.

A good answer to this interview, said Mr. Roosevelt, was contained in a New York Times editorial, also published yesterday.

The editorial recited Hitler's broken promises since the days he asserted he did not want Austria to join the Reich and ended by saying that Hitler "is always the best friend of the next nation on his list for plunder."

This editorial does credit to the newspaper that printed it, said the President.

When asked if he would like to have newspapers refuse to print articles like the Cudahy interview with Hitler, the President said he would not, provided the articles were always accompanied by editorials pointing out Hitler's record of broken promises.

The other propaganda order, Mr. Roosevelt recounted, says that when Winant arrives in the United States German agents should spread a scarehead story that the British are all in and are talking about peace terms.

That story also originated in Germany, Mr. Roosevelt flatly asserted.

All one has to do is to read the stories to note the amazing coincidence, he said.

The New York Times editorial cited by President Roosevelt follows:

"On Misunderstanding Hitler"

"At the end of his interview with Mr. Cudahy in this morning's Times Adolf Hitler complains that he is always being misunderstood in the United States.

"Time after time he has tried to emphasize that the position of Germany and his plans are not inimical to the United States, but his efforts have always proved futile.

"They will always remain futile, unless we become a nation of dupes; for the utter worthlessness of Hitler's explanations and assurances and promises is written in his record. This is the man who solemnly declared that 'Germany has neither the wish nor the intention to mix in internal Austrian affairs or to annex or unite with Austria'—and who then annexed it. This is the man who promised that once the Sudeten question was solved 'there will be no further territorial problems in Europe for Germany'—and who then marched his army into Prague. This is the man who declared that an agreement of his own making with Poland would 'bring about lasting and continuous pacification'—and who then fell upon and butchered and dismembered Poland. This is the man who gave the most explicit possible assurances that his plans were 'not inimical' to Norway, to Denmark, to Holland and to Belgium—and who then robbed them of their freedom.

"It is no news that his present plans are 'not inimical' to the United States. He is always the best friend of the next nation on his list for plunder."

U. S. Set to Run Struck Plane Plant

the huge plane contracts for this country and Britain on which it had halted work.

From Inglewood there came last night a reply of the local union leaders to yesterday's resolution by the OPM's labor policy advisory board denouncing the North American strike and demanding that workers return to their jobs.

William P. Goodman, acting strike committee chairman, issued a statement saying:

"North American strikers agree with the OPM that production should be resumed immediately. This can be accomplished. The company can grant our legitimate wage demands.

"Both the company and OPM have been notified several times of our intention to strike if we did not receive our basic wage clause. These were ignored. Therefore we struck.

"We think it unfair for labor to do all the sacrificing in this situation. With the company it is merely a question of maintaining great profits. With the workers it is a question of food, clothing and housing.

"Blame for the walkout rests not with us but with the company. The plant can be reopened by a simple decision on its part—an O. K. on the union's demand for a 75-cent minimum wage and a 10-cents-an-hour blanket increase."

A. F. L. Men Urge Opening

The A. F. L. Machinists Union at the North American plant has been demanding reopening of the plant and its own designation as the collective bargaining agent for the workers. The C. I. O. strikers, however, have ridiculed the demands.

Frankensteen himself was quoted by the Associated Press as saying of the A. F. L. machinists:

"All they have is a nuisance value. They lost a Labor Board election at the plant and now they are acting like cheap sports."

The A. F. L. union, however, announced a mass meeting of its own for tomorrow afternoon to press its demands for reopening of the factory.

Allyn F. Struer, president of the A. F. L. local, declared "this is a wildcat strike," and pointed out that C. I. O. national leaders had disowned it. He said "we are going to insist that our men be allowed to go back to work."

Roosevelt Dictator, Says Rome

By Camille M. Cianfarra

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, June 6.—The press is telling the Italian people today that the Washington "warmongers" are intensifying their campaign to drag the United States into the war despite the opposition of a majority of the Americans.

"In the unceasing campaign of alarmism, hatred and falsehoods, which is poisoning the American public," writes the Popolo D'Italia's New York correspondent, "the Washington warmongers and Churchill's agents find a new idiotic thesis on which to embroider alarm and intimidate the American people, who remain disunited, passive and disarmed.

"These warmongers are shouting that Germany and her allies intend to force the United States into the war at the very earliest opportunity and are preparing to provoke and even to declare war, if necessary. It seems impossible that such lies may be conceived, but they are nevertheless, being stated with the most criminal force of persuasion worthy of the servants of that ignoble being who directs the British destiny—Churchill."

Virginio Gayda, on the other hand, in the Giornal D'Italia, expresses great indigation over the fact that President Roosevelt is acting as "a dictator taking upon himself full powers which become increasingly greater and lets it be known that he is bored with the control and the votes of the representatives of the people."

Borax and Boric Acid Put Under Priority Control

The Office of Production Management put borax and boric acid under full priority control yesterday because of a shortage caused, it said, by a strike.

Borax is used by the Army and Navy for chemical purposes and for hospitals and laboratories. Boric acid is used in making borosilicate glass, which has a large variety of defense uses.

Officials said that the shortage resulted from cessation of deliveries from the American Potash & Chemical Co., Trona, Calif., where a strike has been in effect for more than three months.

The order will give military requirements for the materials preference over civilian demands.

Argentina Moves To Spur U.S. Trade

Buenos Aires, June 6 (AP).—The government moved today to lift restrictions on Argentine trade with the United States by abolishing the so-called prior exchange permit system.

The decree will permit 85 per cent of Argentine imports to enter free of any restrictions.

Probers Told Pepper Turned On 'Heat' in Airfield Bidding

Pepper."

"You know it was Senator Pepper, don't you?"

"Yes, sir."

Harter said he believed he was speaking for the whole subcommittee in asserting that it looked "very much as if there was a studied effort to delay the award to the lowest bidder."

Col. Earl T. Gesler of the Engineer Corps testified Thursday that the controversy between the two firm caused a delay of a month in getting work started on the project.

R. L. McDougal, assistant WPA commissioner, told the subcommittee that he had been informed that Senator Pepper, intervening on behalf of the Pan American Corporation, put "a lot of heat" on the WPA to have new bids taken on the asphalt.

McDougal said this information was given to him by Roy Schroder, then Florida WPA administrator and now regional director at Atlanta.

The assistant commissioner said he told Schroder the bids were in order and they were not to be rejected. He said both he and Schroder, as well as other WPA officials, believed Allied Materials, Inc., Atlanta, was low bidder and entitled to the contract.

Subsequently, by a compromise arrangement, Pan American was given an order for 1,800,000 gallons and Allied an order for the same amount, with a promise to the latter that it could later deliver an additional 1,800,000 gallons to Elgin Field or another job nearby.

"Heat" Turned On

McDougal said Schroder told him about the "heat" from Pepper in April, while the former was regional director at Atlanta. Schroder succeeded McDougal recently on that job.

The assistant commissioner said he, Schroder, and Chief WPA Engineer Fellows called at Pepper's office April 28 to explain their position. He said they found the Senator "quite angry" at Schroder, whom he apparently considered responsible for the difficulty.

He said the Senator complained that the job had been "badly bungled" because the specifications were stated in such a way that Pan American could not make an intelligent bid.

McDougal said he told the Senator that Schroder was not at fault and that Allied was entitled to the contract.

"I think," he said, "that the Senator had all of one side explained to him and that he hadn't heard the other side. The Pan American people had done a good job of selling him on the idea that they had been wronged."

Pepper subsequently told the Senate he had upheld the claim of Pan American, bidding from its Florida office, believing it was entitled to the contract.

McDougal said that at the April 28 conference Pepper told him he had heard that he was connected with Allied Materials.

"I told him," said McDougal, "that I didn't know the source of his information but that I didn't think much of a friend of his who would repeat such a deliberate lie and that I didn't appreciate it."

J. J. McTigue, committee investigator, asked if Pepper had threatened McDougal so far as his WPA position was concerned. McDougal said he had not.

"Did he make any intimation to that effect?"

"I couldn't call it that."

"What did he say?" asked Chairman Harter (Democrat), of Ohio.

"The Senator asked me in a friendly way—and I didn't take it any other way——," said McDougal, "when my confirmation was coming up in the Senate."

He said he replied to the Senator that on an appointment as assistant WPA commissioner no Senate confirmation was required.

McTigue tried to pin McDougal down on whether Pepper made any threat so far as Schroder's confirmation as regional director was concerned. All the witness would say was that Pepper was "rather mad" at Schroder and only wanted to satisfy himself that justice was done.

Harry B. Wirin, assistant WPA general counsel, said the WPA suggested the compromise when it received information that Pan American was filing injuction proceedings to stop execution of the contract by Allied. It developed, he said, that Pan American did not actually file the proceedings although it served notice of an intention to do so.

"Did it occur to you," asked McTigue, "that this proceedings might be a sham proceeding?"

"No," the witness replied. "We anticipated that we'd have a hot and furious battle in the court and that it probably would be taken to the court of appeals."

He explained that this would have caused a long delay.

Text of OPM Strike Statement

The text of the OPM Labor Policy Advisory Committee resolution on the three West Coast strikes follows:

Whereas, Lodge No. 68 of the International Association of Machinists has called and continued a strike in the ship yards and ship repair shops in the San Francisco Bay area, together with the local union No. 1,304 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the same area, and

Whereas, this strike is in direct and flagrant violation of valid existing contracts entered into in accord with established collective bargaining procedure under which Lodge No. 68 has operated, and

Whereas, this strike seriously retards and menaces the construction of ships crucial to national defense, and

Whereas, officers of Local No. 683 of the United Automobile Workers of America, during the progress of negotiations before the National Defense Mediation Board, and in complete and irresponsible disregard of proper trade union practice, have instigated a strike in the North American Aviation Company plant at Inglewood, Calif., and

Whereas, this strike does immediate and irreparable damage to the vital and important plane production program for national defense, and

Whereas, officers of the International Woodworkers of America have unjustifiably continued a strike of lumbermen and loggers in the Puget Sound region, and

Whereas, these same officers have issued violently false and inflammatory attacks upon the national Government and its agencies, and

Whereas, this strike threatens to interefere dangerously with national defense, and

Whereas, these several actions reflect adversely upon the integrity and patriotism of the American labor movement, and are directly contrary to the best interests of American labor and this Nation, and in essence reject the appeal by the President of the United States that labor cooperate with agencies of the national Government for adjusting disputes in defense industries,

Now, therefore, be it resolved: That the labor policy advisory committee of the labor division, Office of Production Management, wholeheartedly indorses and supports the appeal by the President of the United States that Nation-wide machinery for conciliation and mediation be employed "to prevent interference with production of materials essential to our Nation's security;" and

Be it further resolved, that the labor policy advisory committee unqualifiedly condemns and denounces the foregoing strikes and the union officials guilty of them; and

Be it further resolved, that we do here and now appeal to all legitimate union groups in this country to join with us in this condemnation and urge strongly upon public-spirited officers and members of the unions affected by these above-named strikes that they themselves take action to terminate these stoppages and return immediately to their jobs in these national defense industries.

Nazi Subs Use Beirut Harbor, Turkey Hears

By C. L. Salzberger

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, Turkey, June 6.—Eight German pocket-submarines are now operating from the French-controlled harbor of Beirut, according to reports received today from a reliable official source in the capital of the Levantine territory. At the same time it is understood here that the Germans—presumably by the use of airplanes and submarines—have mined the waters off the coast of Cyprus.

The arrival of the submarines and the laying of mines is taken to indicate either a preliminary measure to a German attack on Cyprus or a step toward blocking British naval patrols in their efforts to prevent German ships from visiting Syrian ports.

It is learned that the eight underwater craft—believed to be of the 600-ton model which Germany has been building during the past year—slipped down from an Italian port during the last two weeks. They could either have come from Trieste, where it has been reported submarines were being assembled after being sent by railroad from the Reich, or from another Italian harbor where submarines are being manufactured by the Italians under German patents and German supervision, as well as with German steel.

While no German ship bearing troops is yet believed to have arrived in Syria, a German report has it that a transport is being prepared in Salonika and is expected to sail Tuesday and to arrive in the Levant Thursday. Because of its source this could be taken with considerable reserve.

Official German sources claim to have received reports that the British garrisons on Cyprus have been heavily reinforced during the past week and that soldiers who escaped to that island from Crete have been formed into new defense units.

Nazi Drive Predicted

Istanbul, June 6 (U.P.)—Turkish political quarters reported tonight that the German high command, already in "control" of Syria, will have enough men and war materials in the French protectorate within two weeks to undertake an invasion of Palestine.

The statement was made as reports reached Istanbul that German Fifth Columnists, mostly using Russian passports, were moving into Iran by the hundreds as part of a Nazi move to obtain control of the country's oil supplies after collapse of the pro-Axis revolt in neighboring Iraq.

Nazi Units Leave Greece

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, Turkey, June 6. — The Beirut radio announced this evening that the German army which was used in the battle for Greece is now being withdrawn. This news came as information was received here that still more Nazi troops were being sent north from Bulgaria to increase already unusually heavy concentrations of the wehrmacht in Rumanian Moldavia, facing the Soviet frontier.

Envoy Says Vichy Wants U. S. Amity

ists between Germany and Vichy. But the Ambassador assailed "false rumors or intentionally exaggerated reports." And the Vichy statement called it "surprising" to see the American Secretary of State describe its policy as one of aggression and oppression.

On the terrace of the French Embassy, in an unexpectedly summoned press conference, Henry-Haye said he would confer with Secretary Hull on Monday after Hull has perused his own government's note.

He denied that air-borne Axis troops ever landed in the French possessions of the Near East but admitted that "a few" German planes have landed, and "there may be German civilians in Syria." He said these constitute "no army" and are not in sufficient numbers to cause alarm. He denied specific knowledge of the number but implied there were less than 1,000 such civilians.

Before adjourning the press conference, replete with sandwiches, smokes and mint juleps, he said France was seeking to "clear out" anything in Syria which might be used as a reaction for British attack.

"We are trying out best to prevent an excuse for a clash between the French and British," he said.

Earlier, in his formal statement, he said "French forces will never, by air, sea or land, take the initiative of any operation against the British."

But repeatedly he stressed that France "with French forces" will defend French territories against any attack. Asked if this meant French possessions in this hemisphere as well as the Near East, he said it meant "all French territories" and any attack "coming from anywhere."

The Ambassador said France "in her misery is prouder than in her wealth," that its army, though defeated, is strong, and that he "as a Frenchman believed an attack on Syria would be unsuccessful."

Asked of the danger of a German attack on Syria, he said he doubted Germany would use Syria "when they already have a front."

Both in his formal statement and in the following interview he cited the record of Franco-American amity and said "in the French conception, the detsiny of France can never be opposed to that of America."

Secretary Hull, who warned Thursday against a French policy of collaboration with Germany which would render France politically and militarily subservient and make it an "instrument of aggression" against other nations, meanwhile indicated he was in no hurry to again receive the French diplomat. He said he would see the Ambassador in proper sequence with other diplomats.

Newsmen had pressed Henry-Haye closely on the extent of Franco-German collaboration. The Ambassador said he would call it rather "a modus vivendi."

"We've got to arrange our everyday life in France according to the present state of affairs," he added. He said he recently told Secretary Hull:

"If you ask me: 'Does France act exactly as the United States would like her to act?' I would 'No.'

"And if you ask: 'Does Frances act precisely as Germany would like her to act?' I would say 'No.'

"When you are sick, you are not acting like when you are well."

The Ambassador, speaking English with occasional substitution of a French phrase, said he was chiefly concerned that false rumors would complicate the present situation. He branded alike as "untrue" reports that the French ship Winnipeg intercepted at Trinidad bore 250 Martinique-bound Germans, or that the German troops were at Dakar, Casablanca, French Mediterranean ports, Lataquie, Syria or anywhere in the French Near East.

Admires Hull

Asked if he implied that Secretary Hull based any part of his statement on rumor, he said he did not, that "I have too great an admiration for Mr. Cordell Hull to make any such accusation."

He said he did not consider his reply to Hull "controversial."

Renewing his request for freeing of frozen French funds to purchase foodstuffs for France, he said Frenchmen cannot understand why "in these financial matters they are much more severely treated than the Japanese, the Italians or the Germans."

"We are not looking for trouble; we've had our share of trouble," he concluded. "We want to remain at peace and take care of our wounds, which are grave enough."

British Blast Italian Plane In North Syria

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, June 6.—The destruction of an Italian warplane in a raid on the airdrome of Aleppo in northern Syria was claimed by the R. A. F. Middle East command today as the first evidence that Fascist aircraft had entered that French mandate.

The British had justified their three previous raids on Aleppo on the ground that German planes were using the Syrian base as a stepping stone to Iraq, but there had been no mention of Italian planes at Aleppo until today.

It was the seventeenth British raid on Syrian objectives.

The British suggested that the Italian aircraft at Aleppo had flown from the Italian Dodecanese base on the Island of Rhodes and this was supported by a British raid yesterday on Rhodes itself.

The new raid on Aleppo mentioned only one plane was destroyed, but the raiders reported hits on hangars and runways that raised columns of smoke from the asphalt and supply bases.

Previous attacks on Rhodes, aimed at disabling the planes before they could proceed to Syria, resulted in explosions and fires at the Maritza and Kattavia airdromes, the British said.

(In a speech to his Levant army, Gen. Henri Dentz acknowledged the presence of foreign planes in Syria, but said they were merely passing through. "Foreign planes coming from the west and going to the east," Dentz said, "have landed in Syria in order to continue their flight. Planes have passed under the same conditions from east to west." The suggestion was that German planes used Syrian airports to refuel in going to and returning from agitated Iraq.)

Meanwhile, it was disclosed in a communique that seasoned land forces from the Union of South Africa have taken positions in Britain's Egyptian line.

South Africa's participation in the Middle Eastern war has been limited to action of the South African Air Force. Sizable land contingents, however, took part in the occupation of Italian Somaliland and recently were engaged in the occupation of Ethiopia.

Fliers Describe Night of Terror As 122 Perish in Canadian Ship

By James E. Brown

By International News Service

London, June 6.—Three survivors out of 14 American airmen, whose ship was torpedoed while en route to England, gave the first eyewitness account tonight of a disaster in the North Atlantic that claimed 122 lives.

In an exclusive interview with International News Service, the three young fliers—J. S. Wiley, of Pine Bluff, Ark.; Austin Young, of Flint, Mich., and Flyde Foreman, of Houston—told harrowing stories of their escape and the drowning of their comrades and the others who perished with the torpedoed Canadian ship.

The eleven lost were:

R. E. Fordyce, Chicago; J. S. Wright, Medford, Okla.; J. C. Torpey, Silverdale, Wash.; E. Friedrich, Peoria, Ill.; R. Burden, Warsaw, Ind.; J. A. Woodall, Dallas; K. B. Collings, Oceanside, N. Y.; W. H. Nance, Houston, Tex.; R. G. Smith, Warsaw, Ind.; E. Landis, Boyerstown, Pa., and R. A. Lowell, Chickasha, Okla.

Speaking slowly as if still haunted by the memory of that terrible night a month ago, Wiley, a volunteer "ferry" pilot with the Royal Air Force assigned to fly planes from factories to combat fields, related:

"We heard a muffled explosion when the torpedo hit. All lights aboard the ship went out, and I heard one of the American pilots in our group—Jim Landis, of Pottstown, Pa.—cry out, 'Well boys, there it is.' There was no panic among any of the passengers who included civilians as well as military personnel.

"The night was extremely dark. The ship began to list. We jumped into a lifeboat and as we reached the water others fell from the deck on top of us. There were about 35 passengers in the lifeboat when it started to capsize.

"I saw Foreman thrown overboard between the lifeboat and the ship. I dived as the lifeboat sank and came up for air. Somebody turned a flashlight on the watery space underneath the overturned lifeboat and I saw 15 or 20 persons caught down there.

"I took a deep breath and dived again. Underneath the boat there were people struggling and fighting. A man grabbed me by the throat. I was almost strangled, but I tore myself loose and managed to come up again for air.

"By that time the liner had disappeared. The water all around was filled with people flailing about and screaming for help.

"I crawled up on the overturned lifeboat where I found Austin Young. But the boat's upturned bottom was slippery, and I started swimming again. Soon I found a ship's raft. I helped one man get on the raft. He was John Garvin, of Ottawa, and he died during the night. I heard him pray during his last hour. It was the only prayer I heard during that night.

"Twenty of us clung to that raft throughout the night. An officer and I took turns giving rubdowns to a Negro ship's cook who was slowly freezing to death. The wind was bitterly cold. We were afraid a German submarine would come up and machine-gun us.

"Just before dawn two lights appeared on the horizon and then we saw rockets. We thought it was a Nazi submarine trying to lure more ships in our direction so they could be torpedoed, too. All of us on the raft became grimly silent.

"Then, suddenly, a British seaplane appeared, signaled to us and flew off. We knew that rescue was near, and sure enough a British destroyer soon showed up on the horizon, and picked us up."

Austin Young who, with ten others, remained on the overturned lifeboat after Wiley jumped off to swim to the raft, said that six men were washed off by the waves during the night.

Tobin Gives Roosevelt Pledge Of Support on Foreign Policy

A pledge of support for President Roosevelt's foreign policies "come what may," constituting in itself a plea for the support of all labor, reached the White House yesterday in a letter from the powerful union of teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers, headed by Daniel J. Tobin.

The letter, made public by the White House, said the pledge was adopted by the general executive board of the union, with a membership of over one-half million."

"We, who are Americans and one of the largest labor organizations in America or in the world," it said, "do solemnly pledge that we will follow out and put into practice any procedure outlined by you and your associates who are handling this most dangerous world situation which is now confronting civilization, and which is threatening the very freedom which the men of labor have struggled to bring about and for which they have made sacrifices untold in all the years that are past."

Declaring that "the labor unions of the countries trampled upon by the oppressors have been destroyed and that only in England is there any semblance of a labor union remaining outside of the American Continent," the board issued a warning to all labor when it said:

"We, the organized workers, fully understand that the tollers of the world will be the greatest sufferers should the monsters now leading the forces of destruction succeed in destroying Great Britain. We are absolutely in accord with you, more fully than we can express, in the principles which you have enunciated in your radio address to the American people, namely, freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from want and freedom from fear; and we pledge our fullest support, and are ready to make any sacrifice to preserve—even with our lives—the four above-named pillars of justice, without which freedom cannot exist.

"We fully understand, Mr. President, that if the invaders who have crushed helpless nations and left them suffering starvation and misery indescribable, are successful in overcoming the last democracy remaining in Europe, we will perhaps in a year or two be the next to be crushed under the heel of the tyrants who despise the very freedom which our Government represents.

"To postpone definite action at this time, if such action is required, is only temporary relief and will not free us from the danger of war but for a short time. We know that if freedom is destroyed, the organization of the workers will be destroyed, the right to own property will be destroyed, and industry and commerce and the hope to go forward will also be destroyed by the destruction of world markets.

"We feel that it would be selfish, inhuman, cowardly and un-American, to follow the doctrines advocated by a few American citizens, of preserving our own skins at the price of the destruction of the other democratic nations and peoples of the world; and we add that such expressions on the part of the very few citizens who advocate such selfish procedure do not represent the feelings and beliefs of the multitude of the working men and women throughout our Nation."

3 Supply Ships WereDestroyed With Bismarck

By the Associated Press

London, June 6.—Three German supply ships and an armed trawler, presumably auxiliaries of the battleship Bismarck and other Atlantic raiders, were sunk by the British in the naval mop-up that followed destruction of the Nazi man-o'-war, the admiralty announced today.

The existence of these supply vessels — if they were the Bismarck's—indicates that she was to be readied for extremely long-range action when she sank the 42,100-ton British battle cruiser Hood May 24 between Greenland and Iceland only to be pounded to pieces by the British three days later.

First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander said last Sunday that the sinking of the Bismarck "frustrated important enemy designs," tacitly contributing to previous suggestions in informed quarters that the Bismarck planned to man captive ships or possibly put landing parties ashore somewhere.

Extraordinary Complement

She was carrying the extraordinary complement of 2,400 men—900 more than normal—when she was torpedoed.

Today's admiralty communique shed little additional light, however, on the "important designs" of the Bismarck, saying merely:

"After recent operations against the Bismarck our forces encountered and sank three enemy supply ships and an armed trawler. These ships no doubt intended to supply the Bismarck and other vessels operating against our trade."

The Bismarck was believed to have a range of about 15,000 miles without refueling. With three supply ships, a couple of tankers and a munitions carrier, she could have ranged the seaways for a year without putting into port

The traditionally tight-lipped admiralty left it to the Spanish government to disclose that the 10,000-ton Spanish cruiser Canarias was near at hand when the Bismarck went under.

The Madrid announcement said the Canarias, arriving by forced draft at a battle scene which was literally covered with bodies, picked up a number of dead crewmen and buried them later at sea with full military honors.

British Envoy To Russia On Way Home

Copyright by New York Times

London, June 6.—It was made known today that Sir Stafford Cripps was in Stockholm en route home after a year in Russia as Britain's Ambassador. It was emphasized that his visit was merely to make a verbal report to his government and has no special significance at this time.

It was declared that his return does not herald the possible news of changes in Russian policy or suggests that Russia is ready now to take a new position in world affairs. Sir Stafford's home-coming is said to be purely for conferences with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and, possibly, with Prime Minister Winston Churchill, as well as having been dictated by personal reasons.

Sir Stafford saw Eden recently in Ankara but there has been much movement in the Balkans and middle Europe since then. Their talk took place before the invasion of Yugoslavia, Greece and Crete, as well as before the preparations for the recent happenings in Iraq and Syria had begun to show fruit.

All have a bearing on the Russian policy and possibly on the Russian official state of mind, which is expected to be the principal topic of Sir Stafford's official conversations on his return.

It was stated that no interview has taken place recently between Sir Stafford and Premier Josef Stalin, though he has seen the foreign commissar, Vyacheslaff M. Molotoff, and Vice Foreign Commissar Andray Y. Vishinsky. It is believed he will return to Russia within a few days after his arrival in London.

Sir Stafford is accompanied by Lady Cripps and she is believed to be anxious to see her family after an absence of more than a year.

and Tunisia and it was said that the recent secret shifting of air force units to Syria and Tunisia will be duplicated in other colonies.

This will be done with full approval of Germany and Italy, it was stated.

Attending the conference were the key men of the French land, sea and air forces, including Weygand; Pierre Boisson, governor general of Dakar and French West Africa; Admiral Jean Esteva, resident general of Tunisia; War Minister Gen. Charles Huntziger and Air Minister Jean Marie Bergeret.

Although admittedly prepared for the worst, French quarters insisted that the Vichy government, for the moment at least, would not go beyond a "vigorous defensive attitude" as regards Syria, Tunisia and other parts of the overseas empire.

The official military spokesman at tonight's press conference announced ominously:

"We can expect fighting to break out in Syria at any time now because it appears that Britain has decided to move in, but our defenses are ready and we will fight alone in defense of the territory entrusted to us as a mandatory power."

Again a stout denial was made of British reports that German armed forces and "tourists" were flooding into Syria and it was denied that the Germans were establishing either land or air bases there in violation of the French-German armistice conditions.

Weygand, it was stated, will not go to Syria because he "knows the Syrian situation by heart" from his long experience there and can direct them from Algiers without a dangerous flight to Syria across the Mediterranean.

The French high commissioner in Syria, Gen. Henri Dentz, was said to have proved himself an able leader enjoying the full confidence of the Vichy government and able to carry out Weygand's orders.

Nazis Want Weygand Out

Madrid, June 6 (U.P.)—Informed quarters here reported today that Germany has demanded the removal of Gen. Weygand, commander of France's overseas forces, because of his opposition to the Vichy regime's program of "wider collaboration" with Adolf Hitler.

Weygand, it was reported, had stubbornly resisted Vice Premier Darlan's new negotiations with the Germans. The report said this resistance is involved in his flying trip to Vichy from his post in North Africa.

British Leadership, War Policy Assailed by Hore-Belisha

By the Associated Press

Edinburgh, Scotland, June 6.—Raising the curtain on forthcoming Parliamentary debate on the British defeat in Crete, former War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha in a speech here today accused the government of dosing the public with 'the narcotic of false confidence in the future."

Hore-Belisha at the same time proposed a common citizenship for the British Empire and the United States as "the most hopeful assurance of the determination of the democracies to establish a new order," and he suggested an "Allied council" to direct the industrial efforts of the United States and Britain similar to the military council in the World War.

Addressing the Scottish National Association, Hore-Belisha described the British defense of Crete as a military disaster, adding:

"We suffer defeat after defeat, and always for the same reasons—lack of appreciation, lack of preparations and imperfecet execution of the project. Each reverse is glossed over by the same series of incompatible explanations, and the narcotic of false confidence in the future is invariably applied . . .

"The bare description of what our imperial forces have undergone in Crete arouses not only the deepest emotion but the most serious foreboding."

A public debate on the Crete issue is expected next week after Parliament returns from its Whitsun recess. Prime Minister Churchill, Secretary of State for Air Sir Archibald Sinclair or War Minister Capt. H. D. R. Margesson will answer critics, although no motion for a test vote of confidence is looked for.

Hore-Belisha frequently has criticized the government's conduct of the war. On May 7 Prime Minister Churchill in Parliament answered his criticism of Britain's production pace by stating that "we are making every month now as many heavy tanks as there existed in the British army at the time Mr. Hore-Belisha left the war office."

U. S. Judge Refuses To Free Soviet Agent

New York, June 6 (AP).—Federal Judge Murray Hulbert refused today to dismiss a complaint charging Gaik Badalovitch Ovakimian, purchasing agent for the Soviet Union, with having failed to register with the Secretary of State as a foreign agent.

Ovakimian was held in $25,000 bail, pending action by the Federal grand jury. He was arrested May 5, and bail was provided then.

Britain Reports Loss Of Her 27th Submarine

London, June 6 (AP).—The loss of the submarine Undaunted, the 27th acknowledged to have gone down since the outbreak of the war, was announced by the admiralty tonight. Fifty-eight such vessels were in commission when hostilities began.

It was assumed here, although not officially stated, that the Undaunted and the Usk, which recently was reported lost, both were new members of the 540-ton Unity class.

Pavelic Visits Hitler, Turns Heat on Jews

By the United Press

Berlin, June 6.—Anti-Jewish restrictions were ordered today in the new State of Croatia, carved out of Yugoslavia, as Adolf Hitler and the chief of the Croat regime, Dr. Ante Pavelic, conferred at Berchtesgaden on the Axis reorganization of the Balkans.

The visit of Pavelic to Hitler's Bavarian mountain-top retreat was the latest of a series of closely guarded diplomatic moves between the Axis and Balkan leaders who are aiding in Italo-German negotiations to correlate trade resources and raw material supplies in southeastern Europe.

Simultaneous with Pavelic's visit the official D. N. B. agency reported from Zagreb that all Jews in Croatia have been ordered by official decree to list their property with the state within 20 days, under threat of severe punishment for evasions.

The Croatian Jews, it was reported, are being organized in ghetto manner, like the Jews of Nazi-occupied Poland, and are required to wear a "yellow spot" button with the letter "Z" for Zionist and the six-point Israelite star.

A Croat official decree forbids Jews to "masquerade" under assumed names.

Pavelic and Hitler had a two-hour conversation in the presence of Reichsmarshal Goering and Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

The Croat leader, whose tiny country was part of Yugoslavia until the German Balkan campaign, was the second Balkan statesman to be received by Hitler in recent days. King Boris of Bulgaria conferred with Hitler and Goering last weekend. While no details of the conversations were available, neutral observers believed the presence of Goering at both conferences indicated that trade questions were in the foreground.

It is apparent that an extensive German diplomatic campaign is in progress, but it is impossible from here to do more than point out that such activity exists.

Fascists Claim Raids on Malta And Gibraltar

By the Associated Press

Rome, June 6.—A developing Axis air offensive against Britain's three major naval bases in the Mediterranean—Alexandria, Malta and Gibraltar—appeared well under way tonight.

Following up Germany's smashing attack upon Alexandria night before last, Italian bombers last night and today attacked Gibraltar, Britain's great fortress at the western gateway to the Mediterranean, and Malta, British base in the center of the sea, the Fascist high command announced.

The German air corps has departed from Sicily, it was announced briefly, after having been based there since January and aiding Italy in the Libyan and Balkan campaigns. These fliers apparently were taking part in the mass attack on Alexandria from nearer bases on newly won Crete and the Greek Peloponnesus.

Italian fliers violently bombed Gibraltar at the other end of the Mediterranean in long flights made partly by day and partly by night with full loads from a base in Italy, the Rome radio said. At the same time other Fascist planes in waves were declared to have bombed Halfar and Micabba, airports on Malta, for five hours.

The Axis air offensive has been launched soon after the conquest of new bases in the eastern Mediterranean, and Alexandria is expected here to suffer heavy hammerings from now on.

Alexandria and Gibraltar are considered Britain's main Mediterranean bases. Malta has been bombed so many times, the Italians say, that it is scarcely serviceable any longer, while Haifa, Palestine port, and the eastern Island of Cyprus are considered too small to shelter large fleets.

Libyan Drive Unlikely

Foreign observers expect meanwhile the Axis land forces in Libya to try to hold their front against the British without attempting a major offensive there while the Germans strike from "the Syria side of Egypt."

Announcement of the German air force's departure from Sicily was made without explanation. It was in the form of a letter, printed in Il Giornale D'Italia, from Lieut. Gen. Hans Geiseler, the force commander, to the prefect of the Province of Catania expressing thanks for favors shown.

The high command announced that an Italian torpedo boat had sunk a British submarine in the central Mediterranean and that Italian land forces had repulsed a British attack in the Salum zone on the African coast.

Roosevelt Studies Plan for Murphy To Tour Orient

Copyright by New York Times

Now that the Supreme Court has recessed for the summer, President Roosevelt is considering asking Associate Justice Murphy to undertake a temporary mission to the Far East to make a report on the coordination of our activities with those of the British in that area.

The President's intention along this line was said to be at the bottom of two recent conferences between him and Justice Murphy who, the President feels, is particularly qualified to undertake the projected mission because of his background in Far Eastern affairs. Murphy was the first high commissioner to the Philippine Islands, and officials of the island government are said to have requested repeatedly that he be sent back there, either permanently or to report on the situation as it has been affected by the European and Asiatic wars.

Murphy has no notion of leaving the court, according to his friends.

U. S. Pacific Policy Stands, Japan Warned

By J. C. Stark

Associated Press Staff Writer

The United States issued a pointed reminder of its interest in the status quo of the Netherlands East Indies yesterday and indicated also that Japan must change its own policy in order to improve relations with the American Government.

Secretary of State Hull recalled earlier declarations of policy on the East Indies in connection with the apparent refusal of that Dutch colony to meet fully Japan's demands for increased supplies of rubber, tin and other important war materials.

To show the American Government's interest in those negotiations from the standpoint of possible political or military pressure from Japan later, Secretary Hull referred especially to a statement issued in April of last year in which he said:

"Intervention in the domestic affairs of the Netherlands Indies or any alteration of their status quo by other than peaceful processes would be prejudicial to the cause of stability, peace and security not only in the region of the Netherlands Indies but in the entire Pacific area."

Policy Unchanged

The Secretary, in discussing relations in general with Japan, emphasized anew that American policy in the Pacific was unchanged.

His comment was directed particularly to reports that Japan had sought a nonaggression or neutrality pact with the United States. In this connection, he reminded reporters that the United States long had had a general policy against nonaggression treaties with individual countries.

His informal comments were believed intended to forestall or counter any widespread impression that the United States was softening its attitude toward Japan in an effort to keep peace in the Pacific.

Indies Reject Japanese Trade Terms

By the Associated Press

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, June 6.—The government of the Dutch East Indies rejected today important sections in Japan's demands for a large share of the rubber, oil and tin of these islands, but there was no sign of the subsequent crisis which the Japanese had intimated would come in the event of an unfavorable answer.

VAN MOOK

While the terms of the Dutch reply were not disclosed, the chief Japanese negotiator, Kenkichi Yoshizawa, emerged from a 90-minute conference with Dutch Negotiator H. J. Van Mook to express disappointment and to predict that it would not suit Tokyo.

"It is my impression," said Yoshizawa, "that agreement will be very difficult."

"Clarification" Needed

Yesterday Yoshizawa had said that the negotiations stood at a "precipice"—an intimation that friendly relations were in the balance.

YOSHIZAWA

Today, however, he described affairs merely as "not entirely satisfactory," remarking there were still points requiring clarification.

In Tokyo, the newspaper Nichi Nichi after a telephone interview with Yoshizawa thus quoted him:

"I expect to hold several more meetings. The Indies' attitude is very strong. If my sincerity won't be accepted I will leave the Indies."

Senate Group Votes to Defer Men Past 28

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday approved legislation authorizing President Roosevelt to defer all men who have reached their twenty-eighth birthday from military training under the Selective Service program.

By a vote of 5 to 3, the committee amended the bill to set a definite age limit for deferring older registrants. The original bill, sponsored by the Administration, had left the deferment age limit discretionary with the President. Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy Selective Service director, had told the group that a top age of 27 probably would be set.

Senator Gurney (Republican), of South Dakota, moved to write the age limit into the bill and was supported by Senators Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado; Thomas (Republican), of Idaho, and Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire.

Chairman Reynolds and Senators Hill of Alabama, and Kilgore of West Virginia, all Democrats, opposed the amendment, but indorsed the purpose of the bill.

It is estimated that some 7,000,000 registrants could be deferred under the bill. They would remain liable to military service under the measure, while men already called into the Army would not be affected by its terms.

A similar measure is pending before the House Military Affairs Committee, where it faces considerable opposition.

The War Department favors lowering the age limit, having found that younger men make the best soldiers. Another complaint is that the older men trained will not remain available for reserves for very long.

Barbara Bennett May Visit Children if Sober, Court Rules

By the United Press

Bridgeport, Conn., June 6.—Superior Court Judge Robert L. Munger today issued an order restraining Barbara Bennett, divorced earlier this week from Morton Downey, radio singer, from seeing her five children unless she is in a "condition of complete sobriety."

Judge Munger granted Downey, who charged "intolerable cruelty," a divorce at a private, uncontested hearing Wednesday. Downey was granted custody of the children.

The Court handed down a written decision today giving Downey "the exclusive care, custody and control of the minor children . . . and of their education and religious rearing and training during their minority."

The decision restrained Mrs. Downey from "any interference whatever," though Judge Munger said she "shall have the right to see and visit such minor children at reasonable times, provided, however, that the defendant alone makes such visits unaccompanied by any other person or persons unless with the permission of the plaintiff."

"The defendant at the time of any visit or visits," the court ruled, "shall be in the condition of complete sobriety and shall conduct herself in the presence and hearing of such children with propriety becoming a good mother."

Downey was given "the right at all times to be the sole judge of the sober conditions and propriety of the behavior and condition of the defendant in the presence and hearing of said children."

Married in 1929, the Downeys were long considered "the perfect family couple" among screen and radio couples. Mrs. Downey announced early this year that she would seek separate maintenance and Downey, after an attempt at reconciliation, filed for divorce here.

Mrs. Downey is a sister of Constance and Joan Bennett, movie actresses. The children are Michael, 11, who was adopted; Sean Morton, 9; Lowell Ann, 7; Anthony Patrick, 6, and Kevin Peter, 3. They are living with Downey's mother at Wallingford.

Defense Needs One-Man Rule, Says Willkie

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 6.—Wendell L. Willkie called tonight for creation of a "coordinated centralized authority under the direction of one man responsible to the President" to assure national defense and as a step toward providing Great Britain's requirements.

He coupled that appeal with an assertion that "America must insure the safe delivery of at least her own production to England," because, "unless those losses of shipments to England are stopped or greatly reduced—and at once—England cannot survive."

"If America insures delivery, we have well-founded assurance that England will survive and England will win," he said in an address prepared for a mass meeting in the Chicago Stadium under the auspices of the all-Chicago citizens' rally committee. The speech was carried on the red network of the National Broadcasting Co. and by the Columbia Broadcasting System (10-10:30 p. m., E. S. T.)

Asserting that the country's problem was "unity," Willkie said the Nation's resources must be directed "to the maximum of their efficiency. But we have no time to spare."

"We must gear ourselves for a united and complete effort in government, in industry, in labor and in agriculture," he continued. "We must wipe out political blacklists. The fittest men to administer the defense, irrespective of their political affiliations or economic beliefs, must be brought to Washington.

Urges Master Priority Plan

"A master priority plan should at once be formulated. Our industrial capacity must be allocated among our military, naval, aeronautical, lease-lend and civilian needs so that one effort supplements another in proper order."

"The hope to do this," he said, "cannot be accomplished through arbitrary power with partial authority scattered among a multitude of competitive bureaucrats and truculent secretaries, each seeking his own self-aggrandizement.

"It must be accomplished through a coordinated centralized authority under the direction of one man responsible to the President, an authority which deals not in political theories and social objectives, but in a single aim—the building of our defense and, as the first step toward it, the providing of Britain's requirements."

The 1940 Republican presidential candidate said, "the President has proclaimed a national emergency. It calls for unusual measures. It requires the organization of our whole economy into one vast, closely operating machine with every part adjusted to every other part and the whole thing ticking like a first-class watch. It can be done and it must be done. There is no time to lose.

"As never before, America needs that spirit of unity which has made and preserved her a nation. I shall continue with all my power to do what I can do to support the President in his foreign policy so long as I continue to believe his foreign policy is the wisest one for this country."

Deplores Reckless Talk

Apparently referring to a recent speech by Charles A. Lindbergh, although he did not name the flier, Willkie said:

"We have lately been informed that this country needs a new leader. That is reckless and misguided talk. We in America do not choose new leaders between elections. We cannot under our Constitutional system have a new leadership until 1944 without revolution and destruction of the very values we seek to save.

"From this same source we have heard the charge that President Roosevelt exceeds Hitler in his aggressive designs upon other nations. This is a wholly outrageous interpretation of the President's statement that this Nation would not permit the seizure by Hitler of island outposts from which he could menace our safety.

"Such an interpretation implies a belief that we should acquiesce in any encroachment upon the Western Hemisphere that may suit Hitler's designs and that to oppose such encroachment is aggression. Only an obstinate determination to remain aloof from present-day realities or a sadly limited comprehension can explain such a point of view."

Strike Rider Delays Vote On Army Bill

By John G. Norris

House leaders forced a quick adjournment last night in the face of a rebellious membership threatening to approve drastic antidefense strike legislation as a rider to the $10,000,000,000 military appropriation bill.

An amendment proposed by Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, barring further employment in defense work of men who "voluntarily" strike on such jobs for more than ten days upset plans of the leadership for passage of the huge Army supply bill late yesterday.

It was the first time in recent weeks that the defense-strike issue had been raised in the House with an opportunity to take action and Administration leaders, after counting heads, decided not to risk a vote on the severe proposal. They adjourned over until Monday, when more of their supporters will be present.

Denounced by members of the labor bloc as "fascistic" and a "breeder of communism," the sweeping amendment was also opposed during the stormy debate by those who have been calling for President Roosevelt to take action in the defense strike situation.

Chairman Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Judiciary Committee, declared that the "executive branch of the Government has all the authority necessary" to stop strikes and termed the Starnes amendment a "dangerous proposal."

"It's an executive job," he stated.

Starnes urged passage of his proposal "as an expression of the House against unwarranted and unnecessary strikes that have been sabotaging national defense." He drew heavy applause when he declared that it was "folly for the President to ask authority to take over industry if he won't meet this strike challenge."

Trickery, Says Thom

Majority Leader McCormack took the floor to oppose the amendment, declaring it would "outlaw the right of labor to bargain collectively."

Representative Thom (Democrat), of Ohio, termed it "plain trickery," and said that it would make it possible for an employer "to destroy the rights of labor by prolonging negotiations more than the ten days off the job."

Earlier, the House overrode the leadership to write into the appropriation bill a prohibition against further cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts in defense work, and Administration chiefs feared similar action on the Starnes amendment.

McCormack later told newsmen that he thought the latter could have been beaten by 30 votes, but decided to wait until Monday when they could round up the votes to assure its defeat.

The barrier on further cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts was sponsored by Representative Engel (Republican), of Michigan, and was adopted by a 98-to-83 teller vote.

Engel, who has conducted a "one-man investigation" of Army cantonment construction costs, told the House that $250,000,000 had been "wasted" on the camp program as the result of excessive building costs.

Eklund Guilty In Sniper Slaying

from Mrs. Eklund came a strained monotone. "He didn't do it. I know "He didn't do it. I know he didn't do it . . ."

As is the custom when death is the penalty Justice Proctor ordered the jurors polled. Eklund stared into each man's eyes, while his shoulders twitched and the livid blush spread about the nape of his neck to the size of a man's palm.

And as each jurors' name was read, he spoke out his verdict, "guilty as indicted."

After each juror's answer there was a hush, until Clerk Silberman began reading the next name. But every brief silence was broken by Mrs. Eklund's gasping repetition, "he didn't do it. I know he didn't do it."

When the 12 men had individually declared their verdict Eklund was led away, still erect, still silent, his face sheet-white. Within two minutes he was whisked into a van, to be taken to the District Jail.

Mrs. Eklund, supported by her sister, Miss Pearl Ward, of Indianapolis, made her way out of the court room and to the stairs, apparently somewhat more composed. But when she was half way down the flight, her knees sagged and she collapsed.

Those about Mrs. Eklund tried in vain for more than 5 minutes to comfort her, while her moans sounded back into the empty courtroom, down the marble corridors and were deadened against the iron walls of the cell block. Then she was lifted and taken to an automobile.

Defense Counsel James R. Kirkland and Leonard P. Walsh said they would file motions for a new trial.

Eklund's attorneys have five days in which to present this motion and might obtain more time if they requested it.

Virginia Won't Seek to Rule Airport Now

No action will be taken for the present by the Commonwealth of Virginia to prevent the District of Columbia from assuming jurisdiction at the Washington National Airport, it was indicated yesterday.

Thus, when the $15,000,000 airport opens on June 16, it will be under District of Columbia laws.

The State, however, is not likely to accept this as a definite arrangement without some settlement of the ancient controversy over the District of Columbia-Virginia boundary line.

Representative Smith Dissents

Richmond B. Keech, corporation counsel for the District, has submitted an opinion that the airport, though located on the Virginia shore of the Potomac River, is a part of the District of Columbia. This means that this city's liquor, tax and license laws will operate there.

Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of the Eighth Virginia District, which embraces nearby Virginia, said yesterday that under no construction of law could the whole of the airport be called District of Columbia territory.

Conceding that the reclaimed, or filled in, part of the airport might be regarded as District territory, Representative Smith said that the part on which the Terminal Building was located was fast ground—that is, land which existed before the airport was even conceived.

"This whole matter should be settled by Congress," Representative Smith said. "A bill definitely fixing the Virginia-District boundary should be passed."

tangled woodland less than two miles from Blue headquarters.

Faced at dawn with the task of making his small force count against the weight of the Blue Division's 18,000 men, Col. F. C. Mahin, commanding the Reds, decided on a swift aggressive battle of ceaseless movement. He sent his cavalry scout cars ranging fanwise toward the north and lost a few of them to Blue patrols. The Third Cavalry he sent on a wide sweeping movement to the north and east, riding and fighting as Stuart so often did for Lee, between the enemy and his swift flanking force.

To the north, meanwhile, Gen. Powell had started his heavy division marching southward, the Eighty-seventh Brigade on the right, the Fifty-seventh on the left, each supported by a regiment of light artillery. Patrols moved ahead and established outposts where they soon collided with the ranging Red scout cars.

Collisions Are Noisy

The first of these noisy collisions took place at the little hamlet of Taylors Corner at 9:45 a. m., where the Reds lost a couple of scout cars. Others occurred along the 14-mile front when scout cars and infantry met suddenly at some bend in the road and both exploded in a patter of rifle and machine-gun fire.

It was 2:30 p. m. before the main bodies first made contact. The First Battalion of the Sixtieth and the Third Battalion of the Blue Seventy-first ran into each other at a place called Dirt Bridge.

For a few brief moments the battle raged in the wilderness fringing the road, then umpires moved out with their colored flags and the Blue force retired in the face of the Red attack. Red infantrymen and machine gunners, more than 60 per cent selectees, ran forward through the tangled underbrush, pushing their line ahead.

Lieut. Col. H. G. Esden, commanding the battalion, watched them running waist deep in the thick, low brush, carrying their heavy weapons through the dust, sending back a platoon of captured machine gunners.

"That," he said, "is where you get fire power."

A sweaty private clopped up to him in the road, his gear clanking. He reported another battalion had reinforced the Blue people across the way. Colonel Esden, his mission being to draw as many Blue troops toward him as possible to help shield the flanking move, moved his battalion back slowly and waited for an artillery barrage that soon came to his aid.

As night fell, the little Red force, pushing ahead on three fronts, counted more than 2,000 Blue prisoners gathered up in its headlong attack. Its demonstration of the power of speed in warfare was well-nigh complete.

2,000 Blues Captured

Observers here, evaluating the battle from a distance, concluded that Gen. Powell had expected some such move on the part of the Reds, though he probably could not know just where it would strike. This conclusion they reached from the fact that he was ready to throw in a superior force so quickly after the Red battalion roared in on his rear.

Whatever conclusions may be forced by tonight's fighting, the battle is officially scheduled to end tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. Then, after a period of rest, the Forty-fourth will start the long march by truck back to its home station at Fort Dix, N. J., and the Sixtieth, with its two supporting artillery battalions, will begin moving southward to Fort Bragg, N. C.

Both organizations made their marches of more than 250 miles to reach here in 48 hours, the Sixtieth traveling 185,000 vehicle miles without an accident.

May Ask Why 5-Cent Milk Plan Curdled

is responsible in part for lack of S. M. A. action to date on measures proposed by The Post aimed at increasing consumption of milk among the District's poor.

These are: (1) Initiation of a penny program in the public and parochial schools, which would at least double the number of child milk drinkers; (2) liberalization of rules which now permit only a fraction of the deserving needy to buy 5-cent surplus milk, and (3) distribution of this low-cost milk in accessible stores rather than at a mere 11 depots, as at present.

A penny project, subsidized by Federal funds, may have to wait for the 1942 appropriation bill to go through before it can be started.

Likewise, the SMA, an Agriculture unit, may have to know how much money it will have to operate on next year before it can broaden participation in the nickel-quart program, similarly subsidized.

However, it could now be going more fully into the matter of store vs. depot distribution than it appears to be doing.

Milk depots—five school buildings, three fire stations, two police stations and the surplus commodities warehouse downtown—seem to be a failure.

They started out lively enough last August, as innovations have a habit of doing, but their flow of 5-cent milk to the needy has long since dwindled to a trickle. On Thursday only 2,300 quarts were sold at the 11 depots. This out of a possible 12,000 bottles.

Social workers and others who have frequent contact with those qualified to buy the milk say the biggest discouraging factor is the great distance many eligibles have to go to the depots. Too, none of the stations is open more than four hours a day, some only two hours.

Conrad Van Hyning, acting welfare director, said he was told yesterday by Reed, chief of the Surplus Marketing Administration dairy division, that retail store distribution would present numerous difficulties.

Dr. Edwin W. Gaumnitz, assistant SMA administrator, told The Post very much the same thing. It might be too costly . . . it might let nickel quarts slip into the hands of noncertified . . . the store system is working in New York but that's a bigger city, etc.

The arguments are unconvincing.

Five local chains of independent grocers have volunteered to carry the special priced milk for a handling charge which SMA officials admit is fair.

The dairy now serving the nickel quarts to the 11 depots would welcome a changeover to retail groceries. (At a 3-cent-a-quart handling charge, it claims to be losing money now because the sales volume is so small).

The District Nutrition Committee, a State unit cooperating with the Federal Security Agency under the national defense program, says the depot system is a failure.

Yet the SMA seems to be giving any improvements the go-by.

Re-Cede Arlington

Twice this week officials must have been assailed by poignant regrets that Arlington County is not now a part of the District of Columbia. In one instance it was revealed that Federal buildings must be erected in Arlington because there is no appropriate space in the District for temporary quarters for defense workers. In the second instance local authorities laid claim to jurisdiction over the new Washington National Airport in spite of the fact that the approaches to it are probably in Virginia.

The dilemma over the location of temporary Federal buildings arises because of the reasonable decision of Congress that Government structures in this vicinity should be in the Capital. Reasonable though it is, that decision will doubtless have to be amended because Congress was so short-sighted back in 1846 as to re-cede to Virginia that part of the District lying south of the Potomac. Now it has no place to locate temporary buildings (and the same may soon be true of permanent buildings) without going outside the seat of Government. The enormity of the blunder of 1846 is now becoming apparent.

We believe the District Commissioners are entirely right in asserting their jurisdiction over the airport. It is true that the line between the District and Virginia is obscure in that area. But most of the airport was built up from the river bottom, and it is known beyond dispute that the line should be at the high-water mark on the Virginia side of the river as it existed at the time of the original grant to Lord Baltimore. Unfortunately, however, the higher part of the airport is probably in Virginia. The unmarked line may easily give rise to a protracted row unless steps are taken to make rationalizing adjustments.

There is little hope of dealing satisfactorily with each of these difficult problems as they arise. Logic and common sense point to a retrocession of Arlington to the Government. In this area live thousands of Government workers employed in Washington. The area also includes Arlington Cemetery, Fort Myer, the Agriculture Department's experimental farm and the Palisades of the Potomac. It is a part of Washington in every respect except political jurisdiction. The time has come to consider seriously a request to Virginia for retrocession of Arlington. In doing so Congress would naturally have to end the disfranchisement of District residents. But that is only to say that two urgent and related local issues, rather than one, are pressing for Congressional action.

Nazi Power Plants

Not so long ago it was common talk over here that Nazi planes, built by mass-production methods, would not stand up in aerial dogfights. Messerschmitt and Heinkel fighters, particularly, were supposed to be inferior in materials and workmanship to British and American fighters. That this assumption was nothing more than wishful thinking is now proved by engineers who have had a chance to study a Nazi power plant captured by the British and shipped to this country for inspection. Taken from an enemy fighter, the Mercedes-Benz DB 601-A engine is reported to be in the best German technical tradition. Its steels have few flaws, indicating the high quality of German aircraft steels. Moreover, careful "foolproofing" of the engine, both in design and manufacture, permits the use of ingenious automatic controls. This is, of course, of the utmost importance, as American engineers have pointed out. It not only lightens the task of the experienced pilot during combat but also enables even the inexperienced to get optimum performance under varying conditions of power output and altitude.

Undamaged enemy power plants are naturally hard to come by. The first duty of a pilot who finds himself forced down in enemy terrain without hope of taking off again is to destroy his instruments and, if possible, his plane. In the course of the war, however, more or less undamaged British and American planes have inevitably, through the fortunes of war, fallen into German hands, just as Nazi planes have come into the possession of the British. In World War I information gained in this fashion was a sizable factor in speeding up the progress of military aviation, and this is undoubtedly the case today. Improvements in aircraft design, while advancing the science of flying, may also improve the dogfight ability of the enemy or his capacity for raining death from the skies. Short of exploding incapacitated planes in the air, lest the enemy learn their secrets, there seems no sure way to prevent this sardonic exchange of technical information.

Priority Test

"In dealing with the present emergency," said President Roosevelt in the message he sent to Congress on Thursday, "too many people have underestimated the degree to which our present resources will be taxed. We cannot afford to make any more mistakes of that kind." The one purpose of this message, however, was to urge Congress further to tax our resources by authorizing construction of the proposed St. Lawrence seaway. Apparently the President did not recognize this inconsistency in his appeal for a project that is dear to his heart. But that only magnifies the responsibility of Congress to scrutinize with the greatest care the relationship of this proposal to the requirements of national defense.

No one will question the President's statement that we need more power and more shipyards. The OPM has announced that consumption of power for nondefense purposes will have to be curbed in certain areas in order to speed the production of aluminum and magnesium for fighting airplanes. The St. Lawrence project would undoubtedly be a boon to national defense if the power it is expected to generate could be switched on now. But the question of beginning now to develop power that could be brought into use four or five years hence raises a wholly different set of questions.

In times of crisis like the present it is literally true that we need more of almost everything. It follows that there is a strong temptation to jump to the easy conclusion that our capacity to produce almost everything should be suddenly expanded. Practical men know, however, that such a policy would produce the same result as a dog's pursuit of his own tail. If we tax our resources to build steel plants and navigation-power projects to supply future wants, we shall have less skilled labor and strategic materials for tanks and airplanes that are desperately needed now. A choice, accordingly, has to be made. For we shall soon have reached the stage, if we have not done so already, where it will be impossible to expand in one direction without curtailing in another.

The task for Congress, then, even if it approves the St. Lawrence project in principle, is to work out a system of priorities. The construction of ships, airplanes and other military supplies is already governed by priorities. Certainly that principle should also be applied to public works advocated in the name of national defense. For, as may be implied from the President's message, we must not make the mistake of taxing our resources at this time for nonessentials.

Even if it were possible to begin a huge four-year construction job without impeding the immediate manufacture of weapons, moreover, another factor might well induce Congress to hesitate. When the production of war materials tapers off, there will be an acute demand for public works to absorb men released from defense factories. If Congress approves the St. Lawrence project, it could advantageously be started at that time. Of course, no one knows how long the war will last. But it does seem more reasonable to link a project requiring four or five years for completion to the reconstruction period than to the present emergency.

Bonds To Buy

In May, Secretary Morgenthau reports, the American people bought $438,230,000 of defense savings bonds and $3,552,000 of defense savings stamps. As he says, that is really a "wonderful start," especially in view of the fact that over 1,000,000 individual bonds were purchased. However, this is only a start. To maintain the driving force required to assure a steady inflow of savings into the Treasury, it is essential to have wholehearted and unremitting cooperation from all sorts of voluntary organizations. And fortunately the Treasury appears to be getting precisely that kind of aid. Labor unions are investing their funds in defense bonds; a good many industrial concerns have announced their willingness to establish systematic savings plans in cooperation with their employes; thousands of banks are acting as selling agents for the Treasury; and commuunity groups, such as the American Legion and the Boy Scouts, are engaged in spreading information about the bonds.

Mr. Morgenthau concedes that it might have been possible to sell more bonds in this first month of the campaign if the pressure methods of World War I had been followed. But those methods did not strengthen public morale. On the contrary, they tended to undermine it, and to create resentment by dragooning people into buying more bonds than they could pay for out of savings. The purpose of the direct appeal to individual investors is, as the Secretary of the Treasury well says, "to give the American people the habit of systematic saving for their country's sake and for their own." The statistics of bond sales in the months ahead will indicate whether Mr. Morgenthau is justified in believing that "we are on the right track." We certainly hope so, for our country faces a financing program of dizzy magnitude.

Peace Offensive

Just as a peace offensive was launched upon the Scandinavian and Low Countries over a year ago, so a similar offensive seems to be in process of being launched upon the Americas. Already the premonitory signals have appeared in the news and comment columns of some of our newspapers. Mr. Roosevelt yesterday named Berlin as the source of the campaign. The accusation was very much in order. Nobody knows better than the President that Hitler makes as much war by talking peace as he does by overwhelming Europe with his panzer divisions. Indeed, in Europe peace talk prepared the way for the blotting out of a dozen countries. Only the day before the Nazis captured Oslo, for instance, the Nazi Minister was assuring the Norwegian Minister for Foreign Affairs that Adolf Hitler had not the slightest design upon little Norway.

The new offensive should be transparent in the light of this experience. That, however, is not the case, and this situation in itself justified the President's counterblast. There are several groups of our people, aside from the sympathizers with Hitler, who might be seduced by a recurrence of peace talk. One group comprises those who are so devoted to nonfighting that they would clutch even at evil to get it. Another is the group which feels that the United States is simply wasting its resources by sending them to a soon-to-be-doomed Britain. The third group embraces those who are not yet convinced that Hitler has designs on this continent. With devilish cunning, therefore, the propagandists in Berlin have been sending out instructions which are destined to make all these groups campaigners in Hitler's behalf.

Perhaps the root of the difficulty is that to many Americans there is still an intellectual difficulty in appreciating that Adolf Hitler is waging a revolution rather than a war. It is a revolution against our country as well as every other country which stands in the way of the world domination of Hitlerism. In Mein Kampf Hitler declared war on this hemisphere as surely as if he had sent an ultimatum to Washington. In his speeches he has amplified his animosity against any country which still allows freedom for the individual in the reiterated statement that his world must prevail against the "pluto-democratic" world. Hitler can entertain no hope of even formal cooperation from the silenced peoples of Europe as long as a citadel of freedom remains in the United States. And the success of his grand design requires that Latin America shall be an economic tributary and a market combined for Hitler's Europe.

It must be agonizing to the British to see the success with which the Nazis are spreading seeds of defeatism about their ability to keep up their epic struggle. They already have provided a new name for heroism. They can still draw upon a vast reservoir of it. But even the British could not maintain such a magnificent fight without the aid and comfort of the free nations of the earth. That they are ready to quit, as some have asserted, is propaganda from Berlin which is controverted in every testimony that our officials and our newspapermen bring out of the British Isles. It is a pity that so many carriers for Nazi propaganda should be available to Hitler in this country when our national policy is dedicated to the extirpation of Naziism.

Dramatizing Defense

It ought not to be necessary at this late date for the Government to keep reminding businessmen of the magnitude of industry's job in the defense program. But apparently OPM officials think that such official reminders are necessary, for they continue to labor the point in speeches from coast to coast. A recent example occurred in Chicago recently. William S. Knudsen told the convention of the National Association of Purchasing Agents that material and mechanical ability to produce is the biggest thing in warfare today. Surely his listeners ought to know that. Perhaps, however, the national state of mind is such that facts rather than generalization on the defense issue are needed. Accordingly we will do our bit: mechanized war now requires 18 men to maintain just one soldier in the firing line. In the first World War only 5 men were so required. That ought to be a startling enough indication of the job to be done behind the lines.

ONE SCATTERED DREAM

Let all dreams be scattered. Let all
Dreamers be quiet in their stalls.

Silence is law: We must obey . . .
Forget our arid thoughts of day

To see the lily petals white
Scattered earthward in the night.

So blindly in the wind and rain
With ear to earth and troubled brain,

We listen in the fragile shell
To seas recede and the seas swell;

And treading fiercely in delight,
Face upward to the starry night,

Our wild hearts cry from pain for ease,
Till we are scattered dreams in seas.

Passing Of The Kaiser

The Kaiser, who conceived of modern conquest and who, it is said, prepared 25 years to start World War I in August, 1914, but who passed his last years in exile in Doorn, virtually a prisoner, has passed to the great beyond. He, like his predecessors in attempting conquests—Caesar, Alexander and Napoleon—gambled with the lives of tens of millions of men, spread misery, destruction, havoc, hate and contempt, only to lose and leave ruin behind as a legacy.

His savagery, his brutal attempt to conquer, was but in vain, but probably stimulated the present dictators to attempt their blitzkrieg of today.

These men, too, will meet their doom the same as the Kaiser. But the passing of the Kaiser merits no sympathy from good-thinking people. God is just. Let us follow only good leadership.

When To Fight?

Every sensible man knows that Uncle Sam is never going to "appease." He is not that kind of a hairpin.

If Hitler beats the British, every sensible man knows that he will first encircle and weaken us with high pressure trade warfare, fifth column penetration here and military penetration in South America. Every sensible man knows that we are bound to fight when Nazi encroachments approach the Panama Canal, if not before.

Anyone opposed to our Navy fighting alongside the British fleet might as well declare his opposition to (a) keeping the war from our shores, (b) gaining time to complete our rearmament program.

Eventually we are going to have to fight whether we want to or not. Shall we wait until that little man snatches the initiative from us?

Nazi Designs

Regarding Roosevelt's recent fireside talk, Germany has officially complained, "Whenever has Hitler said he was striving for world control and power?", and in almost identical words Lindbergh and others of our remaining isolationists echo this complaint. It is true that Hitler's words to us have been as sweet and reassuring to us as they have been to many other neutral countries. But his controlled press and controlled people speak otherwise. Hitler's "Mein Kampf," the Nazi Bible, is permeated with the idea that Germany will ultimately, finally, literally, rule the world. Rauschning, in the "Voice of Destruction," reports many conversations with Hitler in which his master outlined his ideas for dominating our country. In fact, no less a person than the Nazi minister of agriculture has written a pan-Germanic plan for destroying our way of life.

Our President has stated that he will not put us into war "unless we are attacked." But we are attacked when a man harboring these designs on us is in control of the entire continent of Europe, still gaining, and making his continent an arsenal of Naziism. If a man brandishes a knife at us and threatens to use it, we do not wait to see if he is fooling. The fanatic Nazi mind is not fooling—and the latest Gallup Poll shows that we are not, either.

America's Ideals

This war must be regarded as our war by any one who genuinely believes in democracy. For if one loves America, it is not the forests, mountains, sand and earth of America but our ideals that one loves. For there are forests in Finland, sand in the Sahara, mountains in the Himalayas, earth in the Ukraine as good as that we have here. The ideals of America are definitely the democratic ideals of equal rights for all, irrespective of race, creed, class or color, even though at times we fall grievously short of living up to our ideals.

These democratic ideals are definitely contrary to all that Hitler stands for. Hitlerism means the destruction of all democratic rights and enthroning, instead, rule by a master race over slave races and rule by a dictator over the members of the master race in turn. Hitlerism destroys democracy not just temporarily during war or partially, but completely, intentionally and in fulfillment of its peacetime ideals. Those who believe in Americanism must necessarily be at war with Hitlerism, and, conversely, those who tell us that this is not our war are, with few exceptions, people who oppose democracy.

The America First Committee, for example, has respectable and sincere leaders. But their audiences are composed in a large part of the would-be American Fascists and anti-Semites, together with Nazi bundists.

The American Peace Mobilization on the other hand is supported by and probably controlled by believers in the Communist brand of totalitarian dictatorship. Its members will vociferously demand democracy in America and then equally vociferously assert that the Communist dictatorship in Russia is a higher form of democracy."

Thus the bulk of the active supporters of the isolationist committees are supporters of either American, German or Russian totalitarianism. More and more of those who oppose our entry into war, aside from a few consistent religious pacifists, such as the Quakers, are being restricted to those who hate or fear democracy.

White House Pickets

No one should be allowed to picket in front of the White House. The President of the United States has questions of national importance at all times to decide.

When a factory or a department store is picketed, the dispute is settled and pickets are not seen there again for several years. But pickets could be walking in front of the White House every day in the year, since it is the home of arbitration.

The ones that seek consideration should present a petition to the President instead of picketing. While I am opposed to "red coats", such as Senator Pepper, Dorothy Thompson and Secretary Knox, getting the United States into a war to help Great Britain, I am opposed to these pickets in front of the White House.

'Outhitlering' Hitler

Three cheers! There is still a chance that Lindbergh and his friends are rallying behind our Government. Lindbergh stated that the President in his last speech "outhitlered Hitler." Since Lindbergh so often professed admiration for the Nazi efficiency, the logical consequence of this statement should be hitherto unknown devotion to the man who could "outhitler Hitler."

But, I am afraid logic is one of the things you cannot expect from isolationists—and fortunately our President and our country can do without these emotionalists.

Questions Present Shiploading Methods

When I look at numerous pictures published in the press almost daily, showing how various defense materials for the aid of Britain are loaded on and off of ships, I often wonder why steamships do not adopt more modern methods for handling cargo. For example, it seems to be the custom of the average steamship to handle all cargo from the hold of the vessel by lifting it through a hatch, which might be termed a hole in the roof of the vessel, and then placing it on the dock, from which it is later reloaded onto a motor truck or freight car.

Apparently this method of handling is a continuance of the block-and-tackle method used by the Phoenicians more than 2,000 years ago with, of course, some refinements, but not very much. In view of the fact that an average of three weeks is required to unload and reload ships in Great Britain, the shocking loss of precious time resulting from these ancient methods can hardly be justified.

What would happen to our defense program if freight cars and motor trucks were loaded and unloaded through their roofs by ancient methods as are steamships?

Wouldn't it be an absurdity if raw materials going into our factories and products manufactured therefrom were handled through openings in the roofs by means of block and tackle similar to the methods pursued by steamship operators?

Why can't the steamship operators load and unload cargo through the stern of the vessel, in the same manner as is pursued in the operation of railroad car ferries on the Great Lakes, where from 30 to 40 carloads of freight are unloaded in less than two hours?

Why shouldn't the tanks, tractors, cannons, airplanes and other defense material we are furnishing Great Britain be run onto and off of vessels on their own wheels through the stern, just as is the practice in the handling of railroad cars and motor trucks on the various car ferries on the Great Lakes?

Why shouldn't cargo be first loaded into demountable truck bodies and then rolled on and off of ocean-going vessels just as it is in other parts of the country, instead of being constantly rehandled and stowed in the holds of ships?

Why should the steamship operators continue to use ancient methods of loading and unloading cargo with elapsed time of approximately three weeks under present conditions on the British Isles, when by rolling on and off through the stern the same operation can be performed in considerably less than 10 hours?

Why shouldn't we begin to modernize and revolutionize shipping operations in the same manner that the Germans have modernized and revolutionized warfare?

Why shouldn't ship operators be required to adopt modern loading and unloading methods which will expedite deliveries to Britain in the same manner as being required of all others in our defense program?

It can be demonstrated that the loading and unloading of merchant vessels with demountable truck bodies or containers upon elevated ramp tracks through the stern of a ship, can be efficiently completed and to the same capacity in less than 10 hours instead of the several weeks required under the archaic methods now in use.

The time element in our aid to Britain for our own protection is paramount. Yet in our vast shipbuilding program no effort is made to modernize our ships to expedite their loading and unloading. We are clinging to old designs and antiquated methods. Why?

The Post Impressionist

Land And Liberty

There was no road, just a narrow lane, very rutted, and we had to go cautiously and stop sometimes to allow passage for the burros and sheep. Then there was no more lane, as happens in Mexico, and we raced wildly across the fields in the coming darkness until we reached the ranch. It was payday, and a hundred workers were silently waiting, wrapped in their serapes, some barefoot, all wearing sombreros.

We were on our way to meet agrarians. From Toluca to Morelia, on the fine highway that leads to Guadalajara, we were on our way to meet agrarians and see their ejido. Five of us rode in the station wagon of the Agrarian Department, and Carlos was the only one who spoke English; all were agrarian engineers.

Muted villages, trapped in the mountains, villages climbing up the mountains and falling asleep in their curves. Always the terrifying spine of mountain; and some were smooth like custards and jellies, Gulliver-size, with a wooded sauce streaking the sides; and some were wild, jutting their unevenness into the sky, one behind the other. Uneasy and at ease, but the heart always barred in by mountain. The scene ever changing, contoured fields of maguey, terraced like fences, yield into flat alfalfa land and tumble into ravines that suckle dense forests of slender pine; and around the curve, treeless plains fuse into the mountains. Consistent, however, in wonder, courage, silence and mad beauty—and the sky ever constant in its irregular scallop of mountain; consistent in its mystery and gentleness and the way it wraps itself around the heart and secretes an exquisite poison, so that there is no want to escape beyond the mountains, if only the heart could be light, if only the heart could be free.

And the people, the Indians who weave the same pattern all the days, how are they? How can it be told, how can it be known? Only the feel of it can be. It seemed that they were as their land, as the denseness and quiet of slender pine that rose out of the gulley, as the alfalfa waving and praying into the sun, as the rows of maguey, implacably barbed, and the life juice distilled into burning intenseness.

I thought of MacLeish's "Land of the Free." "We looked west from a rise and we saw forever." The States were so definitely east and west and north and south. In Mexico there was no east, no west. There were many rises but no direction to escape the stranglehold of the hacendados. The peons had been trapped on their own land or trapped in the mountains. Land—it was the cry of each revolution from Hidalgo to Zapata; it was the cry that shrilled all over Mexico, and the trapped ones came out and then the cry was dusted with blood.

It must have been the same cry in the heart of the Okies "tractored off" their land, going West for new horizons, for new life—going West for land and liberty. They remembered. They remembered not long back when our West spread out forever. The West was gone, and the land. And the liberty.

"We wonder if the liberty was land, and the Land's gone: the liberty's back of us . . ."

Not so in Mexico. The land was being restored to the Indian. The Indian pattern of organization was being revived. Out of the bludgeoning of revolution and reform, out of the tangle of confused agrarian legislation, had rerisen the concept of the ejido, the communal living before Conquistador and Christianity.

Now the road was as wild as the mountains and as exciting. We had traveled into a most desolate part of Mexico to the blistered plains of Lombardia. Little by little the night came, padded and languid. And when it had fallen all over, it was as if a benign warmness had settled from the purple-pink Mexican sky. The mystery was here but there was nothing sinister or bleak. There was a throb to this night and a heartbeat. We stopped in the blueness to drink the unripe water of cocoanuts. Supper was by candlelight with crawling and flying things all around. A roasted pumpkin was brought in and musicians in white cottons came with their ancient instruments to scrape the sad sad music of Michoacan, over and over again the sad refrain. It was the same music they played for President Cardenas two years ago when he came to give the land to the peons.

It was 10 o'clock and Lombardia was sleeping. The agrarian engineers and the Indian leaders of the Collective Society had gathered around a lamp to talk with ejidal affairs. Carlos and I drifted into the soft, silent night, and stopped in front of the garrison. It had been a church, now it was for soldiers, and the palms in front were so erect, so smooth, they looked like columns. New pillars of society, living, growing, planted in a new soil.

In the morning an Indian woman brought water in a bowl. I effected a Jeeter Lester washing and joined the agrarian engineers. Already the office of the Collective Society had prepared a report for me, and Carlos translated it while we ate breakfast. It was a summary of the production and the organization of the society—and ended on a note for the future:

"Finally, we wish to tell you in a special way that soon we shall have running water in the place destined for the Nuevo Poblado, and we shall begin to construct our houses of stone and not of shingles like those we are now occupying, and in which we lack many comforts and as yet the most elementary hygienic conditions that dwellings require. All this naturally, within a little time, since it has been only a year and some months since we have received our ejido."

As we left Lombardia, Carlos pointed out the stone foundation of the school of the Nuevo Poblado. This was April 10 of last year, the twenty-first anniversary of the death of Zapata. A year has passed. I should like to return to Lombardia and see the houses built not of shingles but of stone. I should like to be welcomed again with a roasted pumpkin and the music of Michoacan, and meet again the chief timekeeper who cannot read or write but knows more than anyone the cultivation of rice. Zapata could not read or write. But he knew more than anyone that the land must be returned to the people: ". . . know that we shall not lay down our arms until ejidos of our villages are restored to us. . . ."

After The Blitz

By Harold J. Laski

Firm Determination To Carry On London.

I HAVE JUST returned to London after a week spent with a colleague on the national executive of the Labor Party investigating the effects of the blitz in the northeast area. Our task was to meet there the labor councilors, A. R. P. wardens and persons in similar positions to discover their experience and take account of the lessons they thought implicit in it. The inquiry was part of a national inquiry which the Labor executive is making into the effects and lessons of aerial attack and their bearing on local government and its problems during and after the war.

LASKI

It is, of course, well known that the area allotted to my colleague and myself has been attacked with particular ferocity; and the damage we saw was, on any showing, tragic in its intensity. But as we inspected it, two things were at once outstanding—first, the speed at which some form of normal life was restored and, second, the rapidity and psychological adaptation to the difficulties that continuous bombardment involves. We saw men and women who have no prospect of a home in the ordinary sense until the end of the war but must carry on ordinary work; and only in two instances was there admission that the difficulties were excessive. As for the rest, clerk and docker, typist and railwayman, demolition worker and auxiliary fireman, they told us their determination to go on was unbreakable.

WE FOUND, we think, that the blitz has not created any problems in local government that were not known before the war. It has given all of these, of course, a new urgency and new intensity; but none has emerged that was not already present. Before the war English local government was a chaos of areas, a chaos of functions and a chaos of finance; it was something like a miracle that so much of it was as good as it was. The blitz means revision of areas, revision of finance and revision of functions.

All those whom we saw, many of them men and women who have given their lives to local government work, are clear about certain things: first, they are in favor of regionalism instead of the present areas, a Merseyside region, a Manchester region and so on; second, they insist that its government must be elected democratically and that the elected persons must be full-time and paid; third, they do not believe efficient reconstruction is possible without public ownership of land, transport, gas and electricity; fourth, they want far greater power to experiment than they possessed in the past, especially in local taxation—they think that without this power reconstruction will be too slow, too uniform and stifled in the delays of Whitehall; fifth, they are all opposed fiercely to any attempt to give permanence to the wartime system of regional commissioners, by which they remain completely unimpressed. They think it has done little good save as a way of meeting the special problems invasion might involve.

Their experience of meeting the blitz fell into certain well-defined categories. First, on the first occasion it always took at least 24 hours for the machinery to get well under way. After the first, it usually began to function sufficiently within eight hours. Second, they were all full of praise for the interurban cooperation, especially in the firefighting and police services. Third, they were enthusiastic with regard to the local citizen bodies. The degree to which pressure on the authorities has been relieved by the swiftness with which individuals made arrangements for their own evacuation when rendered homeless was remarkable. In one northwestern city, where 3,000 houses accommodating more than 4,000 persons were completely disabled, within a week all except 500 were provided with alternative accommodations or provided it for themselves. Fourth, they investigated by a kind of Gallup Poll the causes of evacuation in cases where the houses of evacuees were undamaged. In three of the cities visited, fear of the blitz was given as the cause in only 1 per cent of the cases. In no case had any of the authorities we visited to deal with the effects of panic.

FIFTH, all told us of the almost superhuman efforts made by workers to get to their work the morning after the blitz. This often became a point of honor, not the least with girls working in the munitions factories as much as 8 or 9 miles distant from their homes. Sixth, all were depressed by the degree to which the destruction of schools made anything like normal functioning of education impossible. Seventh, all of them emphasized the enormous effect of the rapid clearance of debris on revival of the spirit of people.

On immediate needs, we found much the same experience and much the same demands. All local councilors were in favor of compulsory evacuation of old persons and children of school age. To their belief in the latter was attached the condition that the government should be responsible for building camp schools and taking over large country houses as schools; failure to do this on a great scale was the chief criticism of the government we encountered. All of them assured that the gravest blitz problems would occur next winter when the problem of housing would assume formidable dimensions. They thought it an urgent matter, therefore, for the government to use this summer for building hutment accommodation within a 10-mile area of factories and to multiply the extent to which communal meals are provided.

There was some division of opinion on evacuation of women not employed in war work. Some of our councilors favored the Hastel system for all workers, with brief but fairly frequent holiday periods in which the workers returned to their families; others thought that work under dangerous conditions was far better done when all possible steps were taken to preserve family life. They agreed that a system of holidays, of at least a week's duration with pay, in safe areas, would be of great psychological importance; and they emphasized the good effect it would have if the self-evacuated and unemployed upper class in lake district places like Torquay were compelled to leave their comfortable hotels to make room for workers who needed a rest from daily risking their lives.

WE FOUND great resentment at the employment of children in agricultural work; Labor Secretary Bevin and Home Secretary Morrison were severely critized for leaving this matter to the discretion of the local authorities.

All in all, this week was as heartening an experience as I have had in this war. It showed the amazing power of the human spirit to triumph over physical tragedy. It emphasized the determination of these people to stick it out whatever the cost, and the strength of their will to maintain the democratic foundations of local government. They want big experiments now; and I do not conceal the fact that they will want even bigger changes when the battle is won. They know what they are fighting for; and no one will lead them after the war who does not share the objectives they have in view.

Army Maneuvers

Dear Ma.

Well believe it or not we have dancing classes in the draft army and if we ever get into a war with Hitler he will sure meet the best rhumba and Le Conga steppers the Axis Powers has been up against yet. A lady named Mrs. Myrtle McQuonnigle who was with a New York dance studio is directing the classes and she has some ladies from the nearest city helping her. You can get a idea how important dancing is regarded by this army from the fact 250 of us enrolled as students right away as against only 11 in a reading and writing class. Dance classes are held twice a week and next week the regiment sponsors a dance in the division hostess house. We do not half to dance only with hostesses on account of 100 young girls have been invited over from nearby villages. I half not felt so interested in army life in months.

I am studying hard to be a dancer on account of Otto Bixby, my old boss, is a very fine dancer who knows all the steps and it always makes me feel very soar when I go to dances and he dances all nite without falling down or tripping up his partner even once while I have no such luck and last week nearly broke a girl's leg and she made such a fuss I was sorry I didn't.

It is not easy to be a good dancer and I do not think Mrs. McQuonnigle is all she is cracked up to be altho after she dances with some of we clumsy jeeps she is cracked up plenty. She says she was head teacher in a big New York studio for years but she must of slowed up a lot and I have danced with better partners witch had never given nobody lessons anywheres. One of the other teachers, a Mrs. Kittery who is not half bad to look at is much lighter on my feet as the saying goes and I think I am making progress. I asked her how I was doing and if she thought I wood ever master the La Conga and she said she did not see why not because she just read I might be in the army for two or three more years instead of just for one year. I thought it was very nice of her to say so.

Into each life some rain must fall as the old saying goes ma and early the next morning when my dogs are dead from my dancing lessons the boys are rushed out into the open country so quick I think maybe there has been an attack on this nation but I find it is just manoovers again. We carried gas masks on these manoovers and the other day we all went through a gas chamber for experience I guess. Otto Bixby's mask leaked and they had to carry him out and I suppose he will now write Nellie Peterson and all the girls and tell how he nearly died for his country.

The questionair business keeps up and the questions get more and more foolish. I guess the man who gets them up thinks the army is full of people who are as dumb as those who answer questions on right or wrong programs. One question was how many months in a year and a lot of the boys said 14 just hoping they might get thrown out of the army. Another question was are bananas a fruit and I wood hate to have Hitler hear of that one and get the idea American soldiers aint even certain about a thing like that. Bananas have nothing to do with no war but I still wood hate to think I was out in No Man's Land with an outfit that thought a banana was a gun.

Another question was are all houses small so I gess it is all a case of somebody having fun with us.

Your loving son,

So long! There in that quiet nave
One footfall has the volume of the roar
You often thrilled to in the golden days
When you were baseball's mighty man of war.

So long! Such is this quiet that a fan
Turns, startled by a rustle on a sill,
And is more moved than by a series' shouts
As he looks at your form so cold and still.

So long! 'Tis but your mortal figure there . . .
Somewhere again you answer the old call
Of sunny fields—kids waving from the stands—
And that old magic, stirring cry "Play ball!"

So long! So long, Lou, in a way, yet why?
Should not our sorrow give to a smile?
For you are flashing 'cross bright fields again
And in the only lineup worth the while.

England is rationing clothes. This isn't as startling as it might be. It has been evident for a long time that if this war lasts much longer a loin cloth will seem a luxury to every nation on earth.

The Plight Of China

By Mark Gayn

(Author of the newly published "The Fight for the Pacific.")

One Shipload Of Arms A Month

IN THEIR OWN quiet, undramatic way, today's tidings from China are almost as disheartening as the news from Crete, Iraq, Libya or Vichy. That few realize China's difficulties is no one's fault. Things have been going from bad to worse for two, three and four years. When they turned just a little blacker, the difference was scarcely distinguishable.

Since last December China has been officially designated by President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull as a member of the great democratic front. She has been given a $100,000,000 loan and promised assistance under the Lease-Lend Act. Simultaneously, Washington checked the flow of strategic materials to Japan and administered some painful verbal spankings to the Tokyo government.

But aid of such sort—though important as a morale builder—could not meet China's political, economic and military burdens. The loan was but a drop in the bucket—and the promised military supplies remained largely a promise.

MOREOVER, since the loan was granted, China has suffered major blows for which dollars are a poor remedy. First came a split in the Popular (Communist-Kuomintang) Front. Next came the Soviet-Japanese pact, the meaning of which is not yet entirely clear to Chungking, but which is already recognized as a major defeat for China. Lastly, today's headlines indicate dangerous successes in the new Japanese campaign in North China.

Enough has now leaked through Chinese censorship to indicate that the Reds and the Kuomintang share the blame for the January clashes. The Communist-led Fourth Route Army has been spreading into new pastures in the full realization that this would provoke a split in the united anti-Japanese front.

The warlord in command of this rich portion of Central China was Gen. Ku Chu-tung, a close aide of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and an ambitious politician of the old vintage. Egged on by the little Kuomintang politicos in the area, by the landlords, the merchants and his own officers, Ku issued an ultimatum to the Fourth Army to get out of his bailiwick within a certain time.

This demand the Fourth Army countered with two very just grievances. The Communist army, its leaders said, consisted of the people of the area—the impoverished tenants, the farmers driven off their land by the Japanese, students and soldiers hailing from this segment of China. These men could not accept any demand to leave their homes and fields and native towns.

Moreover, they declared, Gen. Ku prescribed the exact route he wanted the Fourth Army to follow—and the deadline. This, they said, was an invitation to the Japanese army to watch the route and slaughter its bitterest foes. Ku's order, the Reds said, was an order to the Fourth to commit suicide and it was reluctant to die.

WHAT FOLLOWED is now history. The Fourth was attacked, its leaders captured, its units dispersed. Ku regained control of his lush pastures, and the Kuomintang could continue its work without any competition from the Reds.

Despite all efforts of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek to gloss over the split, there has been no reconciliation. When the People's Assembly met in Chungking in March, the Communist members registered, but refused to attend the sessions. Instead, they issued burning manifestoes that were anything but conciliatory.

My informants in China insist that when Lauchlin Currie was in Chungking, one of his most important interviews was with Chow Enlai, perhaps the most articulate of Communist leaders. What transpired at the meeting is not known, but on leaving Hongkong for the United States, Currie, in a statement, stressed the urgent need for wider democracy "from the bottom"—a perennial cry of the Chinese Communists. My information is that one of Currie's major tasks in Chungking was to heal the Communist-Kuomintang breach—a mission that was not crowned with success.

After Currie's departure, the Kuomintang politicians began to charge wholesale slaughter of their secret servicemen in Japanese-held territory by Communist undercover agents.

The latest item to indicate that the breach, if anything, is growing deeper, is an editorial in Ta Kung Pao, China's Manchester Guardian, last week. The article addressed directly to the Communist leaders, said, in part:

"We have heard many ugly rumors, but believe them to be Japanese-inspired. However, one fact cannot be denied—you are now not helping the other government forces to fight the Japanese. Your noncooperation has given the Japanese an initial success."

The successes were more than initial. The Japanese have dealt the non-Communist armies a series of painful blows, have occupied strategically important mountain ranges and now can—if they wish—cross the Yellow River into the loess-blanketed, barren Shensi, towards the munitions route from Russia. Meanwhile, the Red troops conserve bullets, blood and energy and watch the lashing being administered to their conationals not blessed with the spirit of Communism.

IN SOME SINISTER, as yet uncertain, manner, the Communist-Kuomintang quarrel of January is linked with the Stalin-Matsuoka agreement of April. Is the pact Moscow's answer to the Kuomintang moves in Central China and to the growing American influence in Chungking? Is there an invisible, and yet a very real, connection between the pact and the Communists' uncooperative sentiment in the Battle of Shansi?

The only answer could be found in statistics of the Soviet military supplies given to China. If they had been reduced, Moscow has definitely broken with Chungking. If the supplies still pour in, the Russo-Japanese pact dealt with areas and issues other than China. But both Chungking and Moscow maintain silence on the flow of arms.

Outwardly, there is a display of feverish amity. Thus Gen. Chiang personally called on the Russian military attache in Chungking to tender congratulations on the Soviet army day. Yet the same day in several parts of China there were clashes between Communist troops and their Kuomintang rivals. And a few weeks later, in Chungking itself there were audible complaints against Russia's "betrayal" of China and an official protest against Moscow's truly incredible recognition of Japan's conquest of Manchuria.

If China has been betrayed by Russia, her only remaining lifeartery will be the Burma Road—a tenuous, tortuous, easily severed lifeline.

The most optimistic of China's friends put the quantity of supplies moving over the Burma Road at 7,000 tons a month. The insignificance of this figure can best be expressed in this manner:

With roughly 2,500,000 men in the field, with practically no industry, with reserves of military supplies running dangerously low, China is waging a major, total war on just one shipload of supplies a month.

Were it not for China's powerful allies—space, number and a magnificent capacity both for endurance and noncooperation with the foe—her one-shipload-a-month struggle with Japan would have been a tragedy. But even with these allies, there is a desperate need for succor.

THUS FAR, the evaluation of the Sino-Japanese has been based on negative values. It was not that China was winning, but that Japan could not deliver the knock-out blow. China was doing all right not because she could return the blows, not because she could regain any of the lost ground, but simply because—with knees buckling with face lacerated and bleeding, and with no punch left—she refused to go down for the count.

This reasoning—now also being applied to England—is dangerously shortsighted. Wars are not won by absorbing punishment. They are won only by punishing the opponent. Thus far, China has returned few blows and with each new military and political reversal her ability to deliver blows is being reduced.

On Tuesday, President Roosevelt included China once again among the component parts of the anti-totalitarian axis. If this statement is to be more than a phrase, aid must reach China before she is beyond aid. China needs arms, planes, medical supplies, machinery, doctors, military instructors, financial advisers—and money. These are needed desperately—and at once. Even capacity for suffering has a limit.

Fair Enough

Men Of Germany

THE KAISER'S DEATH was well timed. At a moment when some Americans are searching the past, the present and their own imagination for reasons not to believe that Germany is an absolutely ruthless and brutal nation, respecting no right but her own, which is even known as the German right, the old pictures reappear out of the morgues showing the monarch and his military flunkies at the height of their arrogant power and furbelowed glory. Most of the world had forgotten the Kaiser as he was before 1914 and in the early days of the first World War—a vain and self-deified mortal with a withered arm who delighted to hang himself over with flashy ornaments of jewels and gold and carry a scepter and brandish his sword at other peoples. Seen again as he was then, the quiet recluse of Doorn, who ran away from his people, although he had vowed, like Hitler now, to die in battle first, reappears with fluttering feathers and a brass eagle on his hat. He reappears as the aggressor who was going to absorb Belgium and much of France and said that God was with him when his soldiers counted off the Belgian peasants leaving Sunday mass and executed one in ten in reprisal for the patriotic resistance of brave citizens.

PEGLER

THAT, AND NOT the harmless woodchopper, was the Kaiser of the German nation before he fled. And the terms which that man intended to impose on all who fell before him in that war were such that the Treaty of Versailles not only seemed but was indeed a forgiving peace.

It has been said and written often since that Germany's rivalry of Britain caused that war, and the issue has been fogged beyond hope of final settlement except in conformity with the national sympathies of the individual. But the fact will never be obliterated that the Kaiser was a truculent ruler, with the greatest army on earth, who favored decisions by the sword and actually did regard himself as one appointed by God to execute the divine plan according to his own judgment and held all other rights to be nonexistent where they clashed with the German right.

Thus it will be seen that Adolf Hitler differs very little from the discredited ruler whom he repudiated only because the Kaiser failed. In the matter of ornate uniforms and spectacular guards Der Fuehrer makes a contrast, for he sold himself to the Germans as a simple man of the people and brought some of the people into the ruling group. But, even so, he has yielded to the tyranny love of tyranny and display.

The uniform that he wears now, though unadorned by the ostentatious modesty of his humble Iron Cross, no longer is the greasy raincoat of his early days. And the pageants which he has given in his own honor have outshone even those the Kaiser gave himself.

He, too, speaks of his great patience and his terrible but always righteous wrath, and the frightful terms which he has inflicted on the fallen peoples are no more than the fulfillment of the Kaiser's own benign charity toward those who had the effrontery to wish to live as free human beings and not as serfs of the arrogant German.

HITLER, TOO, is on very intimate terms with God, who is a race-pure German, and for those who are more advanced in Germanism he provides a special god arising like a vapor out of the German soil and no other soil. To them the state of being German is divine, because their nation is God, and all members of the German state and race, therefore, partake of the godly being. And the German state being God and God incapable of wrong, all German perfidy is right and the Frenchman, Czech, Norwegian, Dane or Pole lives not by any right but only because the German does not find it advisable to kill him. He lives to serve the German as the horse lives to serve the farmer, but, like the horse, he has no right to live.

There is not much difference between the Kaiser and Hitler except in detail, and both will be known in history as embodiments of a national spirit which regarded all other peoples as their inferiors in all respects. That the world could succumb for long to such rulership obviously is not in the plan, and Hitler now, with each new conquest, adds to the hates which one day must destroy his empire.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

On Painless Perfection

THERE ARE AN astonishing number of people about who profess to be all in favor of many omelets but would rather not break too many eggs. They will be found arguing, as the sacrifices of a war economy are asked of them, that there is no use fighting against the threat of a regimented world if Americans have to regiment themselves in order to succeed. When the argument is pressed home that one cannot live a normal life in an abnormal world, many will retort that they do not know whether there will be after the war perfect freedom and general prosperity and a lasting peace.

LIPPMANN

Not only do they seek the miracle of victory without sacrifice but they want also a guaranty of perfection or they are not interested in victory. If they cannot be assured a painless progress to a heaven on earth, they would, it appears, just as soon go to hell.

IF THIS STATE of mind had prevailed in 1776, Gen. Washington and the Continental Congress would have been asked to prove that "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" would be enjoyed by all the inhabitants of the colonies during the Revolutionary War and they would have been asked also to produce in 1776 a draft of the future Constitution of the United States.

For, had the American colonists been brought up to think as some today think, they would have said to Gen. Washington: "You tell me that I have an inalienable right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, and yet you ask me to risk my inalienable life at Bunker Hill and Saratoga. You tell me I have an inalienable right to liberty. Yet you want me to regiment myself in regiments where I must obey commands. You tell me I have an inalienable right to the pursuit of happiness. But I do not see how I can be very happy in the snow at Valley Forge. Finally you have told me that I shall be risking my life, foregoing my liberty, and sacrificing my personal happiness in order, as your warmongering Continental Congress puts it, to escape 'absolute despotism' and 'to institute new Government.' But I haven't seen your new Government, and how do I know it will be a good one, and how can you prove to me that under this new Government there will never be another war, never be hard times, never be high taxes, never be any of the things which as a civilized man I profoundly dislike?"

IF ARGUMENT of this sort, which is so common today, was ever used by the American colonists, it has been charitably forgotten. The state of mind in which such arguments are developed has no relation to the facts of life. For it is not in the real world of effort and struggle and risk but in a world of fairy tales and daydreams that great things can be done without sacrifice and with the guaranty of perfect success. It would not have occurred to the men who made this country that its blessings can be enjoyed forever merely by extolling its blessings and enjoying them. They would have had grave misgivings had they thought there would ever be many who thought it cost nothing to make a free society, or that it ought to cost no one anything to maintain it unless, as a bonus for his efforts, he were presented signed, sealed and delivered a quick, sure, inexpensive and perfect existence in the very near future.

They would have said, had the question ever been raised, that, of course, men have to earn their living and win their liberties,—a hard, disagreeable and dangerous business. So when the authors of the Declaration of Independence began by announcing that all men have an inalienable right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness they concluded the Declaration with a pledge of their own lives, their own fortunes, and their own sacred honor. It did not occur to them that they were contradicting themselves.

Nor were they contradicting themselves. For in their philosophy the ancient faith still persisted—that a man does not live for himself alone, and that his life and his liberty and his pursuit of happiness are not confined to his private and immediate existence but belong to a greater community in which, though he sacrifices himself, he survives.

If to some of us today this sounds like buncome, let us remember that all we are and all we have we owe to men who held this faith.

British Public Overwhelmingly Favors Compulsory War Work for Women

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., June 6.—Surveys of wartime public opinion in Great Britain, which have just been completed, indicate overwhelming approval of the Churchill government's program to register young women for compulsory war jobs, according to new studies by the British Institute of Public Opinion.

Last winter Labor Minister Ernest Bevin announced plans for the registration of women in the younger age-groups, with a view to reassigning them wherever necessary to work of wartime importance.

So far actual registration of women 20-21 has taken place.

According to the British Institute survey, the move has the approval of three persons in four, despite some fears earlier held by officials that there would be strong objections. The British Institute put the following question to men and women in all parts of the United Kingdom:

"Do you approve or disapprove of women being compelled to do war work?"

The replies were:

APPROVE	75%
DISAPPROVE	22
UNDECIDED	3

American Attitude

In the United States, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has proposed drafting younger women for training in defense activities.

Testing the possible reception of Mrs. Roosevelt's idea last December, the American Institute of Public Opinion found sentiment almost evenly divided, with a slight majority opposed at that time.

Morrison Foresees Independent Wives

London, June 6 (U.P.).—Post-war laws may grant British wives sufficient income to make them independent, Home Security Minister Herbert Morrison predicted today.

"What women did in the last war was child's play compared to what they are doing now," he said. "At the end of this war women are going to be a handful to manage."

Fire Sweeps Hold Of President Liner In Jersey City

Jersey City, June 6 (AP).—A fire in the hold of the President Jackson of the American Presidents Line was extinguished today after it had burned for an hour and a half.

Police Capt. Thomas Brown said the fire started when an acetylene torch which was being used to attach bolts to a door ignited a burlap bag.

The fire sent clouds of smoke billowing from the ship. Capt. Brown said it was confined to one hold and destroyed several cases of candy. An estimate of the damage was not immediately available.

Sailing of the vessel, one of seven requisitioned from the line by the Maritime Commission for use as naval auxiliaries, for San Francisco on her last commercial run was postponed until tomorrow. She was scheduled to leave this afternoon.

Short Tale About A Doggy Hospital

Charleston, S. C., June 6 (AP).—A young lady called at a veterinarian's office late in the afternoon to see a friend's dog.

"I'm sorry," said the polite attendant, "but the dogs have retired for the night and can not be disturbed. Visiting hours will begin tomorrow at 10."

Pain 'Like a Needle' Proves to Be a Needle

Chicago, June 6 (INS).—When John Carpenter told his draft board that for the last four years he had been experiencing a sudden pain "like being stuck with a needle," he was absolutely right.

An X-ray today disclosed a surgical needle, an inch and a half long, broken off and imbedded in his neck at the time of an operation.

Cream Is Fat, On Blacklist For Stouts

By Ida Jean Kain

WE ONCE heard of a lady who had a million dollars and still couldn't have cream in her coffee. She had to count her calories, if she expected to keep her figure.

Cream is one of the fats and fats are so high in calories that they are on the blacklist for anyone with the disinclination to gravitate into the unstylish stout class. In warm weather, with the menus running to sandwiches made with mayonnaise, salads mixed with French dressing, and tall, cool beverages, frozen desserts and berries all enriched with cream, it is a list that bears watching.

Suppose you take just a sandwich and salad for lunch. Plain, they are slimming fare, but not when 300 or so calories in dressing are added. Then there are the nice cool beverages. The 18 per cent cream that goes into them counts only 30 calories per tablespoon, but who takes just one? Same with sugar. It isn't the first lump for 25 calories that counts; it's the second for 50.

Iced Drinks an Illusion

For the moment, such iced drinks may cool you off. But it's only a fleeting illusion, for actually they are high in calories—high in fuel—and you either burn it in energy or wear it as a coat of fat.

Proof that you can get used to going without these delectable trimmings is furnished by the reducers who develop a preference for black coffee. They like the taste of the coffee. While you are about it, you might as well extend this rule of no cream or sugar to summer fruits and berries and surprise yourself with their natural flavor.

Fats, however, are the main obstacle to normal weight. They count double the other food constituents. For example, a serving of meat with the fat left on counts twice as high in calories as the same-size portion of the same meat with the fat trimmed off.

It is a good plan to use as little fat as possible in the preparation of food. Frying fat counts 100 calories per tablespoon and meats and vegetables absorb untold calories in the process of cooking by this method. If you have any regard for your figure, make it a rule to bake or broil all foods. Gravy is another thing that can be very well left out. It is essentially fat—and you get almost as many calories in one scant helping as in half a cup of mashed potatoes.

When You Don't Miss It

Save your fat calories for the butter that goes on baked potatoes and corn-on-the-cob and on your breakfast toast. You don't miss the fat you can't see nearly as much.

But wherever possible in the summer menus, do without such trimmings.

Look 11 Years Younger; New Booklet Tells How

YOU can be young only once, but you can be youthful all your life, Gelett Burgess tells you in his stimulating book, "Look Eleven Years Younger."

Old age isn't a matter of gray hair and wrinkles. It's the way you think and act and talk—the little habits you may not be aware of.

When you sit down at a restaurant table do your hands immediately start a series of meaningless little gestures—folding in an attitude of prayer, "washing," "ironing," or touching objects on the table? A sign that behind your lipstick you're growing mentally old.

Youth is up to the minute, quick on the trigger. Youth's attention doesn't drift from the business at hand! You, too, by "conscious control" can appear youthful long after the calendar tells you otherwise.

Watch your hands! Sit up straight. Keep your eyes and attention on the person who's talking to you. Just because there are younger people in the room don't sink back and let them have the center of the stage. And keep your sense of humor! Soon people will be saying of you "How young she is!"

Round the Clock Wardrobe Given For Young Girl

Hollywood, Calif. — Priscilla Lane, movie star, says, in discussing spring and summer modes for girls of her age and type:

"For something fresh and youthful in the early morning, a soft, cool printed silk with border hemline is a dress you'll enjoy wearing. And if you're given to jumping out of a negligee into a pair of slacks, this same type of silk interpreted in trousers will set you up for the day as thoroughly as your breakfast coffee. I have slacks in a black and white cross-bar print with border design of small black bowknots.

"Then a quick 10 o'clock change for some tennis on one of these fine spring mornings is an easy one. Just step into a dashing one-piece sun-suit in comfortable linen or gaily figured pique—try a shell print here—with a slide fastener to insure comfort.

"In not-to-be-questioned taste is a cool black afternoon dress. Many girls immediately discard black with the appearance of warm days, but I add two more frocks to my wardrobe, one for afternoon, one for evening. Try something in a sheer this summer with plait-like tucks from waistline to knees and for flattery a border of white lace at the neckline.

"For dependability nothing tops a semitailored suit in pencil-striped pique that is easily laundered. Suggested as a clever quick is a skirt in vertical stripes, a jacket in oblique stripes, and patch pockets in the vertical lines again."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Loving Married Man Without Hope, Woman Makes Marriage of Convenience, After Which His Wife Dies and He Proposes; What Should She Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Five years ago, I was in love with a man who was married and had two children. We knew each other for three years and he loved me also, but never considered divorce. He said his wife was "a good woman," had never given him any reason for divorce, and the fact that he had grown to care for me was unfortunate for both of us, but had no bearing upon his marriage.

I accepted the logic of his attitude; and upon receiving an appointment with the Government, came here and never saw him again. Nor did we correspond. We lost track of each other entirely, as we had few mutual friends, and the town in which we knew each other was not my "home town."

Now, however, I have received a letter from him, which he had mailed to my former home address, in care of my mother,—whose name he knew, although he has never met her. The letter informs me that his wife has died; that he has no idea how I feel now with regard to him; but that he still feels the same and would like to marry me.

The problem is this: I am now married to a very fine man, have been married for nearly three years, and have been contented, although not terribly in love. My husband is 20 years older than I. He knows that I was not really in love with him when we married. He knew it then, but insisted it would work out very well, because, so he said, we had mutual respect and common interests, enjoyed each other's society and he "had love enough for both." It has worked, up to date.

Now, however, I have a horrible feeling of having "botched" things badly. I jumped into a marriage that would run smoothly enough to survive as long as there were no tests to meet. I married under the false assumption that love isn't necessary, as long as mutual respect and common interests exist. In doing so, I feel I have thrown away the one opportunity for real happiness in my life.

I admire and respect my husband and know it would hurt him dreadfully if I were to leave him now. I also know that he would not lay a straw in my way if he knew I wanted my freedom—which makes it all the harder for me to ask for freedom. I have not told him of the letter, nor have I answered it yet, although I must answer it soon, in one manner or another. I await, and will value, your advice. Sincerely, N. D. R.

Contentment Is Touchstone Of a Good Marriage

DEAR N. D. R.: I think you are conjuring a problem where none exists, doing a bit of bootless daydreaming of what-might-have-been, in supposing you have a decision to make here. This man gave you distinctly to understand, five years ago, that he would not divorce his wife ("a good woman, who had never given him any reason for divorce") just because you and he had, unfortunately, grown to care for each other. His stand was that of a hard-headed realist; or, if you will, of "a man of honor," who doesn't believe in chasing romantic fancies like so many will-o'the-wisps, at the expense of callously breaking civilized contracts.

If considerations of principle (or practicality) could keep him impersonally loyal to his wife while he was admittedly in love with you, it is extremely unlikely that he would ask, or even want you to abandon a "very fine husband" in order to marry him, now that his wife is dead. Had he known you were married, it is probable you would have had no word from him. And when he learns the truth, it is probable he will immediately and apologetically retract the proposal,—keeping his bitter disappointment (if such he feels) to himself, and wishing you good fortune and contentment in your present alliance.

However, let us suppose, for the sake of discussion, that after learning of your marriage, he writes to say that the proposal still stands, if you are willing to get a divorce and marry him. In that event, I would advise you to stay with the husband you have, for the reason that you have already found substantial contentment with him; and substantial contentment in association is, after all, the very touchstone of a "good marriage." In marrying the other fellow you would be getting "a pig in a poke," no matter how well you may think you know him, and no matter how powerfully he may appeal to you in a romantic way.

That intoxication of the senses known as being "in love" inevitably wanes as marriage settles into a perennial routine,—a fact which your erstwhile married admirer likely took into account (along with other considerations) in deciding not to put aside one wife to claim another, merely on the strength of a passionate attraction. As erotic rapture gradually fades, the couple is lucky who has found, in the meantime, justification for mutual respect, deep fondness, and spontaneous enjoyment of each other's society,—plus a fund of common interests in which to invest their leisure.

Without benefit of romantic exhilaration you have established this kind of rapport with your husband; have been building with him, from the first, on a safe and sane foundation. And with the other man you have no guarantee that, as his wife, you would feel equally secure, contented and cherished. There is a possibility, indeed, that you would find yourself in the final analysis as impersonally treated, as casually and dutifully tolerated, as was his first wife.

You have, in this marriage, a feeling of profound security, stemming from a knowledge of your husband's boundless and grateful devotion, that is bound to bring you full measure of happiness in the long run—providing you remain as appreciative of his companionship as you were until the disturbing letter came. I cannot believe you would find peace or personal growth or lasting spiritual rewards of any sort through betraying your husbands trust—after having found sanctuary from old heartbreak with him—just because that other man whom you once loved now offers to come into your life again. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Rugs Once Thought Luxuries Are Now Easily Possessed

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

BRIDES of this June don't dream of getting along without a rug or carpet as a major item on the budget. And yet up until 100 year ago, rugs were far down on the list of necessities in the home. The rich and the royal in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries could have Oriental rugs or fine French Savonnerie or Aubusson rugs, but these were all precious possessions . . .Not so long before that these wonderful woven fabrics were considered too fine for the floor, being used for wall or table coverings. Those in modest circumstances, and that included most everybody, made hand-hooked, braided, woven, crocheted or knitted rugs—usually these were really just mats.

The machine age made woven floor coverings a familiar sight in America. First came carpets in narrow widths that were sewed together to cover the floor completely . . . The narrow width carpet was followed by the mitred rugs and the seamed rug. Then came the first room-sized rug woven in one piece, the "art square"—remember? Now we're back again to carpeting the whole floor, with both broadloom widths and narrow loom widths available, and seaming need not be sewed, but can be achieved by invisible taping with adhesive agents.

In the '90s we had 1.08 square yard of carpeting per person in the United States; by 1929 we'd achieved 1.37 square yards each. In between, however, there'd been a drastic drop because we went through the hardwood floor era and took up with linoleum. Now we appear to be entering a new well carpeted era. Certainly that's a very comfortable padded pattern of life to anticipate.

With moth-proofed yarns, twist weaves that won't show foot marks and can't come untwisted even after a shampooing, and new dirt-and-crush-resistant fibers, it looks as though we were going to be stepping pretty soft in the seasons ahead.

300 Drop In on Big Garden Party At the Russell Sards Home

By Carolyn Bell

Yesterday might well have been titled "caterers' delight," for a dozen or more parties kept society on the go from 5 in the afternoon until well after 8. With one exception—and that was the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard—the fetes were of the "Oh-I've-just-asked-a-few-friends-to-drop-in" variety.

More than 300 guests found their way to the Thirty-first Street home of Mr. and Mrs. Sard yesterday to sip mint juleps—or iced tea. With the weatherman cooperating (for a change), the party was held in the garden, where the pool, abloom with water lilies, was the center of attention. Mrs. Sard greeted her guests wearing a simple gray afternoon frock.

Although she had no assistants—strictly speaking—a group of her friends wandered about to see that everyone had their drink. High ranking Army and Navy officers were very much in the limelight. Admiral and Mrs. John H. Towers chatted with a group . . . Capt. and Mrs. Allan Kirk, not long back from London, held court . . . and Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles dropped in for a while.

Diplomats Attend Garden Party

Mrs. J. B. Sturrock, wife of Capt. Sturrock, of the British navy, who is here on a mission, was assisting the hostess, as were Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. Bertram Long, Mme. Wennerberg, wife of the Counselor of the Swedish Legation; Mrs. Richard Wilmer and Mrs. G. F. Thorold, wife of the First Secretry of the British Embassy.

Diplomats by the dozens attended. The dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, was there as were the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil . . . the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins admired the excellent view from the garden, which faces a lovely wooded glen . . . the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Loudoun attended . . . the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne did likewise . . . the British Minister and Lady Campbell were the center of a group . . . Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin dropped in for a mint julep, as did Mr. and Mrs. William Batt and many others.

Admiral and Mrs. Potts Also Entertain

Another fete with Anglo-Saxon emphasis was the small party given by the Naval Attache of Great Britain and Mrs. H. O. Pott. They invited about 50 guests—mostly naval officials—to drop in between 6 and 8 o'clock. These hours are becoming increasingly popular, what with longer working hours for diplomats and officials. The Potts also boast "a little bit of a garden" at their home on Fulton Street and yesterday they took advantage of the extra space. Sir Henry and Lady Chilton, who have been in South America on a British mission, attended the party, as did the Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard G. British Y. W. C. A. Aide Tells of Work in Blitz

By Lucia Giddens

Her London house fell in ou her during a bombardment and she picked herself out of the bricks. She set slum people to doing folk dancing in the black marble ballroom of Barbara Hutton's London mansion when it became a hostel for the homeless.

Miss Winifred Galbraith related such experiences yesterday in an interview when she came to the office of the World's Y. W. C. A. here for its Council meeting, as a proxy for Great Britain.

She compressed something of the scope of the meeting into one sentence, as a Japanese girl, Kiyo Takeda, entered the room and nodded assent when Miss Galbraith hailed her: "Didn't I see you in Hongkong on your way to Amsterdam?"

As a Y. W. C. A. worker in China for 10 years and in England since the war broke out, Miss Galbraith will tell the council how welfare work is being carried on under upheaval conditions.

When the drastic "blitz" set in last fall in London, the Y. W. C. A. loaned Miss Galbraith to the ministry of health to aid in the rehousing of homeless. She helped to open a hostel in four large empty houses—including Barbara Hutton's mansion—Paddington, where 150 slum people found refuge.

Suddenly Miss Galbraith found herself among the dispossessed. She had been staying in her parents' home at night, although they and the servants had gone to the country.

"One evening last September, without warning from sirens, there came a flash and a bang. Bricks fell all over my head. For a moment I thought I was dead," she said.

One rueful thought flashed through her mind: "And this is the week 'that my new book is coming out!'"

Then she realized that she could see out into an open space.

"And I decided if I could see out, I could get out," she said. So she began picking herself out of the bricks from the fallen wall of the room in which she had been sitting.

By the time she was free, she heard shrieks from a woman across the street and went to help her. On the way she saw a crater, left in the street by the bombardment.

"Then I heard a dignified voice calling 'Help! Help!' I traced the call to a nearby house, where I found an elderly woman. When she saw me, she looked down and asked rather formally, 'And who are you?'" Miss Galbraith related laughingly yesterday.

Miss Galbraith helped her to avoid a "fountain of fire" which was spurting from a broken gas main. Then the group sat in the road to wait for ambulances to come. Miss Galbraith had a cut on her head but it did not necessitate her staying at the hospital. So she "took some of my own medicine" and went to a rest center for the homeless, just as she had been sending other people there.

In the next few days, when she went to the country to tell her parents that their house was beyond repair, her father said: 'I feel that I am a very fortunate man—I still have my daughter."

"That's the way people are taking the loss of their homes. They are being shaken loose from their hold on material things," she added.

"People are being prepared for a big social and economic reconstruction. The war is breaking the hard core of the people who have always been secure, and is bringing about such cooperation as we have never seen before," she said.

Thus, "some positive values are emerging out of the destruction, Miss Galbraith said.

"To the people living under such conditions, each day has a heightened meaning, because we can't be sure of tomorrow," she added.

She came to the United States in March and, after a series of speaking tours, will sail for China on July 11, to take up her work as a Y. W. C. A. secretary among the refugees in the western part of the country. She is the author of the recent book, "In China Now," published by Morrow.

In England, she said, Y. W. C. A. work now has three major emphases. "We have been asked to run the first five of the big new hostels for munitions workers. Housing approximately 2,000 workers each, they are built in the countryside where factories are being located, away from the bombardment of industrial centers," she said.

The Y. W. C. A. is opening recreation centers for the women in uniform. "Already there are 600,000 of them, doing a variety of noncombatant work, such as driving cars and acting as telephone operators. An appeal is being made for 500,000 more women, 18 years old and over."

For its third major task the Y. W. C. A. is opening 164 new recreation centers for young industrial workers, both boys and girls, 14 years old and up, she said.

Miss Galbraith said she heard no defeatist talk in England. "Everyone is sure that we can hold out and, as American help becomes more and more available, that we will gain superiority," she added.

Miss Galbraith was among the first of approximately 50 women arriving here for the world's Y. W. C. A. council and executive committee meeting at 1201 Sixteenth Street Northwest. Sessions opened last night with a discussion of problems in the international situation, and will continue through Tuesday. Delegates and proxies have come from a portion of the 52 countries where the Y. W. C. A. is at work.

Army Plans For Seaway's Use by 1943

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Army engineers are preparing plans to enable 10,000-ton ships to move from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic within two years, it was disclosed yesterday.

President Roosevelt, replying to argument that the St. Lawrence waterway project could not be completed in time to affect the defense program, told his press conference that lake-built ships could be moved into the Atlantic within two years under the plans being drawn up by the Army.

War Department engineers later explained that elimination of a few "low spots" in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence could complete an 18 to 20 foot channel by 1943 and that the 27-foot channel from Lake Ontario to the ocean could be ready by 1945.

The Canadian-American St. Lawrence agreement, which Mr. Roosevelt on Thursday requested Congress to approve without delay, does not contemplate completion of a 27-foot channel from Duluth to the Atlantic before 1948.

Army engineers pointed out yesterday, however, that a 24-foot channel is now available for eastbound shipping through the Great Lakes and a 21-foot channel for west-bound shipping. Completion by 1945 of a 27-foot channel through the International Rapids and other rapids near Montreal therefore would open up the Great Lakes to a substantial amount of ocean shipping, they said.

Meanwhile at the Capitol legislators continued to express skepticism as to the value of the St. Lawrence power and navigation project to the defense program, and a poll of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee showed an almost even division of opinion.

Out of 19 committee members who could be reached for comment, six supported the project, seven opposed it and six were non-committal.

The committee is opening hearings June 17 on legislation introduced by Chairman Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, to approve the Canadian-American agreement and authorize the President to begin work on the project immediately.

Mansfield said he expected Secretaries Hull, Stimson, Knox and Jones to testify on the measure. Governors of six States and spokesmen for the railroad industry have notified the committee they wish to be heard, he added.

The State Department is "bearing the brunt" of preparing the case for the project, one committee member reported, and all the members interviewed indicated that they expect to confine their questioning almost entirely to the value of the seaway to defense.

President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday agreed with a correspondent who suggested that those who oppose the St. Lawrence project because it cannot be completed before 1945 might as well oppose appropriations for battleships which cannot be finished before 1946 or 1947.

Power Ration Is Ordered In Southeast

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, June 6.—Electric power consumption by nondefense industries in the Southeast will be rationed after 6 a. m. June 16, Georgia Power Co. officials disclosed today.

The rationing system will be placed in effect by the Tennessee Valley Authority and Commonwealth & Southern subsidiaries, including the Georgia uitlity, the Alabama Power Co., the South Carolina Power Co., the Mississippi Power Co., and the Gulf Power Co.

Power company spokesmen attributed the move to falling lake and river levels with a resultant slowing of the turbine movement.

Originally scheduled for June 9, action was postponed to permit companies and the TVA to work out details for the allotment of power to industry and to lessen confusion among consumers.

The rationing system was decided upon at a closed session here last Wednesday by Leland Olds, chairman of the Federal Power Commission; representatives of the Commonwealth & Southern subsidiaries, the TVA, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Army and Navy.

Previously the companies appealed to all consumers for an overall 20 per cent reduction in the use of electricity, and Southeastern cities almost immediately complied as ornamental lighting was eliminated and whiteways darkened.

Actually the drought, which now has a stranglehold on the Southeast, began in December, 1939, although the situation is greatly accentuated by the fact that no general rains have fallen in the region for the past 42 days. Crop losses are continuing to mount.

3 Aviators Killed In Crash of Planes From U. S. Cruiser

San Diego, Calif., June 6 (AP).—The Navy reported today that three fliers were killed and one was injured in a midair collision of two planes from the heavy cruiser Chester near San Clemente Island.

Naval authorities said the accident occurred late yesterday. The injured man was brought to the Naval Hospital here.

The deaths brought to 24 the number of naval aviation men who have died since January 1 in accidents involving San Diego-based planes. In the last naval crash in which there were fatalities, April 18, three fliers perished when their torpedo bomber fell into San Diego Bay near North Island.

Dr. Julia Donates $100 For Memorial to Edelstein

Dr. Mario Julia, director of the Clinica Julia in Puerto Rico who has lived in Washington several years, yesterday donated $100 to the National Cathedral Post of the American Legion through its senior vice commander, Frank Buckley for erection of a national memorial here to racial tolerance, in memory of Rep. Michael Edelstein who died Wednesday.

"I did not know Congressman Edelstein," Dr. Julia stated, "but due to the circumstances surrounding his death, I regard him as a martyr to tolerance." The Congressman died following an impassioned talk against racial intolerance.

When a memorial is erected, Dr. Julia said, "I should like to have it stand as the answer forevermore of the real people of America to those in the world who would raise a barrier against fellow humans because they happen to have been born to a particular race or creed."

Martin Fears Dictatorship in Property Draft

Glens Falls, N. Y., June 6.—Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, minority leader of the House and chairman of the Republican National Committee, tonight declared that the bill seeking to give President Roosevelt power to commandeer industrial plants and other property was giving the Administration "power to take the watch out of your pocket."

His address, which was broadcast nationally over the Mutual System, was made before a forum of New York State Republican Clubs.

He said that if the measure became effective, there would be no need for the United States to worry about the aggression of dictatorships abroad for the reason that dictatorship would already have arrived in this country.

"If the President needs more special power for defense, let him be specific. No executive has ever had a more cooperative Congress than the present one," he said.

"The Chief Executive now has plenty of power to break any jam in defense production if he desires to do so.

"There is no need or excuse for this demand for superconstitutional powers."

He continued:

"Unity we must have. We must build, and build quickly, a national defense adequate to protect us against any threat of aggression from any source whatever. But unity does not mean blind, unquestionable submission to the dictates of any political bureaucracy or oligarchy. Unity means intelligent cooperation. We Republicans have proved by our acts and our votes, in Congress and out, we are at all times fully ready to cooperate intelligently. We are just as determined upon an adequate national defense as any class of citizens in this nation. We do not concede any political group, or clique, or bureaucracy or oligarchy has a monopoly of patriotism. We do not concede any such group has any corner on America. This nation is the nation of all of us.

2. DRILL TEAM of Bethel, No. 2, Job's Daughters, attired in natty uniforms, passes in review at the Night of Thrills

Color ran riot last night at Griffith Stadium as the local Masonic order presented before nearly 23,000 spectators its annual pageant—the night of thrills.

Her majesty the queen, Dorothy E. Clair, held an armful of roses and said she was "very happy," as Col. O. H. Saunders, commanding the Twelfth Infantry at Arlington Cantonment, placed the crown on her head in a coronation ceremony which began the evening program.

Two queens of other years, Dorothy Herring and Jean Carnahan, who reigned in 1938 and 1939 respectively, along with Masonic dignitaries expressed their congratulations to the new queen. Clark Griffith said it gave him "great pleasure to pledge his allegiance" to her.

Following the crowning ceremony the queen and her court reviewed a parade of more than 2,000 uniformed persons who marched about the stadium forming a multi-color mosaic on the green grass.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, of the District National Guard, clad in a blue and gold dress uniform led the parade. Then came khaki-clad troops from Fort Meade, Md.; the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase band in scarlet helmets; the American Legion guard of honor with glittering sabers, and numerous other organizations, bands and marching units.

After the parade had left the field a four-ring circus magically appeared with performers at each base of the ball diamond. Acrobats, clowns and midgets and all the rest took over with Leon Brusiloff's orchestra supplying the music.

The singing of the national anthem by the audience and performers concluded the program.

Earlier in the day the Heurich Brewers triumphed over the O'Donnell's Grill team by the score of 14 to 4 in a baseball at the stadium to begin the annual affair for the benefit of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home.

Woodyard was crossing Wisconsin Avenue Northwest in the 2000 block—not at an intersection—when he was hit by a Capital Transit car operated by Thomas H. Young, 42, of Rockville, Md., police reported.

Although the wheels did not pass over him, Woodyard was caught beneath the vehicle and the Fire Department Rescue Squad had to be called to extricate him. The squad took him to the hospital, where he died shortly after 10 p. m.

Couple Struck Near Zoo

William Denis, 30, and his wife, Estelle, 26, of 1416 Hopkins Street Northwest, were injured last night when struck by an automobile as they crossed Connecticut Avenue at the Zoo.

Taken to Emergency Hospital, Mrs. Denis was treated for a leg fracture and Denis was dismissed after first aid. Police listed Owen B. French, 72, of 3420 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest, as driver of the automobile that struck them.

George Washington, colored, 5, of 1721 Seaton Street Northwest, suffered serious head injuries and a fractured leg when hit by a truck at Johnson Avenue and S Street Northwest. Jesse Purvis, colored, 31, of 802 V Street Northwest, was the driver, police said.

Bus Hits Truck

Mrs. Mary Edge, 58, of Arlington, Va., was recovering in Emergency Hospital last night from injuries received when a Washington-Virginia-Maryland Coach Co. bus on which she was riding crashed into the rear of a truck at Nineteenth and K Streets Northwest, yesterday.

Police said Mrs. Edge was thrown from her seat when the bus, unable to stop because of a broken air line in the braking system, struck a Washington Gas Light Co. truck stopped for a traffic light.

Harry J. Walker, 29, of 1448 N Street Northwest, was listed as the driver of the bus and David J. Parker, 36, of 1215 Fiftieth Street Northeast, was operating the truck, according to police. The case will be heard later in the corporation counsel's office.

Conference Set By LaGuardia On D.C. Defense

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Baltimore, June 6.—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, the country's new director of civilian defense, will confer Tuesday in Washington with the District Commissioners and defense leaders on problems of protecting the Nation's Capital from armed attack.

This announcement was made here today following an executive meeting between LaGuardia and 60 State and city representatives from Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia.

"There is a great deal to be done in Washington yet," said LaGuardia, commenting on the District's defense program at a press conference after the meeting.

"I am satisfied with the way things are going at present, but I want to talk with District officials later."

As he left the closed conference in Baltimore's City Hall, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent and chairman of the District defense council's committee on civil protection, said Washington's defense program thus far was "directly in line" with LaGuardia's outline of national activities.

Like Any Other City

"He (LaGuardia) said he wanted to talk to us about specific problems," Maj. Brown declared, "and a special conference has been arranged for Tuesday."

Although Washington may be the Nation's Capital, LaGuardia said, it will be treated "just like any other city—a distinct unit in the Third Corps Area."

He said Washington's place in the national defense picture might present "special problems for the Army" and indicated he would attempt to iron out any existing problems at his Tuesday meeting.

Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz reported after the City Hall conference that he was "highly pleased" with the way Washington's defense program fits into the national scheme.

Although reporters were excluded from the Baltimore meeting, LaGuardia later stated that "nothing secret" was discussed. He said he described to the various State and city officials the need for volunteer civilians as auxiliary fire fighters, police officers, air raid spotters, hospital and medical assistants and instructors in a variety of other defense duties.

Fire Equipment Stressed

Questioned closely by reporters about air-raid spotters, LaGuardia said no definite plans had been devised.

"I hope," he added, "that the Army and Navy will do the 'spotting' 500 or 1,000 miles out."

The Mayor laid great stress on the need for additional fire fighting equipment in all cities. He said for each 10 fire engine companies in every jurisdiction, at least $430,000 worth of new equipment is needed and five auxiliary fire fighters for every existing regular fireman.

"There is a 94 per cent chance," he added, "that we won't need this extra equipment and auxiliary force. But we can't afford to take a chance with the remaining 6 per cent."

Admitting that the problem of obtaining funds for the extra equipment was 'his headache," LaGuardia intimated that he would seek Federal subsidy—authorization from Congress to purchase the equipment and turn it over to the various communities.

LaGuardia named Gov. Herbert O'Conor of Maryland Federal director of civilian defense for his State and Mayor Howard Jackson of Baltimore, director in Baltimore.

In addition to Commissioner Kutz and Maj. Brown, other Washington delegates were Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, and executive officer of the District Defense Council; Roberty Bondy, chairman of the council's welfare and consumer interest committee and Maj. Beverly Snow, assistant Engineer Commissioner.

The Mayors of Hagerstown and Cumberland, Md., and Lynchburg and Roanoke, Va., also were present.

Dr. Francis E. Eiseman, superintendent of Garfield Memorial, expects many of the girls to enter nursing work in the national defense program.

D.C. Tax Rise, U. S. Payment Under Study

Commissioners To Discuss Plans At Capital Hill Session Next Week

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

The District Commissioners will be called to Capitol Hill early next week for a conference with legislative leaders on a proposal to couple a $2,500,000 increase in the Federal payment with a boost in District taxes, Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee disclosed last night.

At the same time, Chairman George H. Mahon of the District Appropriations Subcommittee revealed that action has been completed on a record District appropriation bill of approximately $55,000,000. The measure, together with transcript of the subcommittee's executive hearings, will go to the printers over the weekend and will be ready for presentation to the House Wednesday or Thursday, Mahon said.

New Tax Bill Drafted

Representative Randolph revealed receipt of a new tax bill drafted by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech. The measure proposes to authorize an increase in the Federal contribution to District expenses from $6,000,000 to $8,500,000. It also would raise the gasoline tax levy from two to three cents a gallon and the real estate rate from $1.75 to a minimum of $2 per $100.

Tax rates proposed by the draft bill are identical with those provided in a measure prepared by the Congressional legislative counsel. The counsel's bill, however, would require the $4,000,000 estimated yield of the rate increase to be spent for capital improvements.

Mahon, Hunter to Attend

The conference with the Commissioners, Randolph said, will be attended by two legislators most closely identified with fiscal affairs of the District, Representative Mahon and Chairman John F. Hunter of the Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee.

While revenue estimates for the fiscal year starting July 1 are ample at present, tax rates to cover all items submitted by the Commissioners for the appropriation bill, the District heads are known to have confessed privately to members of Congress that the 1942 budget totals represented the city's "minimum needs."

The Keech tax bill is the product of the hope that Congress will be willing to forget its traditional opposition to larger Federal payments if District taxes are increased.

White House Shut To All Sightseers Save Military Men

The White House, long a high point of interest for Capital tourists and sightseers will be closed to all visitors, except military men in uniform, beginning next week, it was announced yesterday. This includes the famous East Room, the state Dining Room, the Blue Room, the Red Room and the Green Room.

The official reason given for the closing was to permit workmen to construct a new floor for the east room, where formal dances and social events are held and where President Roosevelt made his latest "fireside chat" in the presence of diplomats of the various American republics.

Also all the doors on the main floor are to be refinished and repaired. Other minor alterations are to be made in other rooms, it was said. There was no indication when the White House would again be open to visitors.

Control of D.C. Rents Sought For President

Rent-control experts of the office of Federal Price Administrator Leon Henderson have sought support from Congressmen for a bill to make President Roosevelt Washington's rent czar, it was disclosed last night.

In one instance, at least, their efforts have kicked back with the result that Chairman Jennings Randolph of the District Defense Subcommittee, has called a special meeting for 10 a. m. Wednesday at which the experts will make a detailed explanation of the measure. The meeting will be closed.

Representative George J. Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, a member of the subcommittee, said that one of Henderson's aides telephoned him to make an appointment for discussion of the measure. Bates replied, he said, that in his opinion the measure should be discussed at a time when all members of the subcommittee could be present.

Bates explained that when the subcommittee conferred on the bill with officials of Henderson's office last week, he was unable to attend because of important legislation then pending before the Naval Affairs Committee, of which he is a member.

The bill drafted in Henderson's office would empower the President, or an administrator appointed by him, to control rents and the quality of services provided by landlords. It was prepared as experimental legislation to be tried out in Washington and to be used in other defense areas if found practicable.

Randolph introduced the bill May 28. Previously he had held extensive hearings on a measure, also introduced by him, to freeze District rents upon enactment and establish a commission to determine subsequent rent levels.

Party at the Other End Must Have Been Enthralling

James Menefee, 18, of 101 Saul Road, Kensington, Md., and Graham Finlayson, 19, of 3931 Oliver Street, Chevy Chase, Md., became engrossed in a phone call they were making last night in a telephone booth at Forster's Drug Store, 1133 Eleventh Street Northwest. So they were astonished, after hanging up, to find the store dark, except for one light, and the doors locked.

They called the police, and the police went for the proprietor. The proprietor brought the keys shortly after midnight.

"It was our chance to get all the ice cream we wanted," said Finlayson, a senior at Woodrow Wilson High School. "And I wasn't hungry."

Hershey Lauds Home Defense Volunteers

Brig. Gen. Louis B. Hershey, deputy Selective Service director, and others gave pep talks last night to more than 400 men and women who have volunteered to register District residents Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday for volunteer civilian defense work.

"I salute you as soldiers just as much as those who have gone," Gen. Hershey told the volunteer registrars in the Interior Department north auditorium. "You can serve to the same extent as those in uniform . . . for this great work I commend you."

In addition to hearing inspirational talks by Hershey, Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, speaking for the District Commissioners; Dean Elmer L. Kayser of George Washington University, and Maj. Campbell C. Johnson, executive assistant to the director of Selective Service, the workers received instructions from Ensign Edward J. Clarke, chief of Selective Service man power, on how to register volunteers at public schools next week on the "R" days.

The registration will be under the Central Volunteer Bureau of the District Defense Council, which will coordinate the civilian defense work of those who volunteer.

Pointing to behind-the-lines organizations as a vital necessity in defense, Gen. Hershey remarked that "the thing that has been the drawback of most armies in the field has been a collapse of the countries behind them."

Dean Kayser declared that "America's part in this war is being won or it's being lost now," and added: "From every point of view except the legal concept we are today at war . . . We must realize that unlimited emergency faces us and that unlimited emergency is the unlimited emergency presented to us by the imminence of total war."

If "the mere contingents in the field" are to succeed, he said, "back of them must be 100 per cent of effort."

Canadian Flier's Uniform And Cash Missing Here

John R. McCulloch, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, reported to police last night his gray R. C. A. F. uniform—Size 40—was missing from his room in a downtown hotel room. He said $17 in cash was also gone. He gave his address as Charletteown, Prince Edward Island.

Statesmen and Nine Old Men To Hold Ball Game Here Today

Fair and warmer is the forecast for today's classic at Griffith Stadium—the baseball game between Ham Fish's "Statesmen" and Lowell Thomas' "Nine Old Men."

Representative Fish's team is made up of Senators and Representatives, Republicans and Democrats, interventionists and isolationists. Lowell Thomas' aggregation consists of famous radio commentators and entertainers, columnists, sports writers and a celebrated Catholic priest.

Whether any of them are ballplayers will be determined when the game opens at 2 p. m. In any event, the thousands who are expected to flock to the park will have some laughs and hear some good music. The Marine Band will start playing at 1:30 p. m.

Thomas' team is made up of himself, Lanny Ross, Father (Boys Town) Flanagan, Babe Ruth, Eddie Eagan, Ted Shane, Les Kramer, Col. Stoopnagle, Homer Croy, Graham McNamee, Jim Farley, Bob Ripley, Prosper Buranelli, John Kieran, Gene Tunney, Frank Buck, Jask Dempsey, Paul Webb, James Melton and Gene Sarazen.

The tentative line-up of the Statesmen is Senator Mead, third base; Speaker Rayburn or Representative Joe Martin, shortstop; Senator Wallgren, senond base; Representative Fish, first base; Representative Allen, pitcher; Representative Shenley or Representative Thomas, catcher; Senator Taft, left field; Senator Davis, center field; Senator La Follete, right field; and Senaor O'Mahoney, short field.

If numbers are the decisive factor, Fish's team ought to win, because he has a whole raft of substitutes, about twice as many as Thomas.

Proceeds from the game will go to American charities, including the Home for Incurables and Emergency Hospital. Tickets are available at all Peoples Drug Stores, leading hotels and at the offices of the Sergeants at Arms of the Houes and Senate. Prices: $1 for grandstand, 50 cents for bleachers; children half price.

In advance of the game, between 10:45 and 11 a. m., members of the two teams will gather at the base of the Washington Monument to see if they can catch a ball dropped from the top by Walter Johnson. This stunt will be broadcast over WJSV by Arch McDonald.

Safe in the arms of Jesus,

Missionaries Asked to Stay Loyal in Spirit

More than 400 Presbyterian missionary workers from here and abroad last night heard pleas for renewed "spiritual loyalty" in a war-darkened world.

The message came from Mrs. A. E. Kelly, of Santa Ana, Calif., president of the Women's General Missionary Society, United Presbyterian Church, which opened its annual convention at Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, New Hampshire Avenue and Randolph Street Northwest.

Declaring that Christian people are confused today because they are taught to "love your neighbor" on one hand and "prepare for war" on the other, Mrs. Kelly said that there would be a "big difference" today if there had been as much spent in the past for spreading the Christian gospel as there has been for military might.

Emphasizing the convention slogan of "Be Ye Steadfast," Mrs. Kelly spoke on "Steadfast Under His Banner." Vice-President Mrs. H. Ray Shear, of Pittsburgh, presided and introduced members of the General Society's Board of Directors, the convention officers, home and foreign missionaries, local committeewomen, and others. The River Road United Presbyterian Male Quartet sang.

The annual thank offering service will take place tonight at 7:30, with Mrs. O. H. Milligan, of Pittsburgh, general thank offering secretary, presiding.

Delegates tomorrow will attend worship services at River Road churches. They will gather for a memorial service at 2:30 p. m. at Wallace Church. The program for tomorrow at 8 p. m. will be devoted to foreign missions, with delegates from Egypt, Ethiopia, India and other lands speaking.

Methodists Gain In Membership, Bishop Reports

Baltimore, June 6 (AP). — The Methodist Church has "just passed through one of the most productive and encouraging periods" in its history, with membership rising and church attendance growing rapidly, Bishop Charles W. Selecman, of Oklahoma, said today.

"There have never been so many in attendance at preaching services, nor people studying the Bible," he told a meeting of laymen and laywomen of the Baltimore Conference, Methodist Church.

George B. Reeves, chief of the camp section, National Service Board for Religious Objectors, estimated 2,500 to 3,000 conscientious objectors to military service would be classified among the 17,000,000 men in the national draft.

A social service banquet and laymen's program closed tonight's program. Appointments are scheduled to be ready Monday by Bishop Anna Wright Leonard.

One of Seven Local Pastors With 224 Year's Service

At his church on E Street near Seventh Southwest, Dr. Briggs has welcomed 4,000 members; married 5,000 couples, conducted 3,000 funerals and made 40,000 pastoral calls. Accidents Held Prime Cause Of Output Loss

The District yesterday formally received the bronze plaque as third-place winner in the national A. A. A. pedestrian protection contest, with a reminder that accidents are causing more lost work days than strikes.

The speaker, Representative Clifford Davis (Democrat), of Tennessee, said he deplored the stoppages in industry by labor-management difficulties, but pointed out:

For every man-day of idleness resulting from strikes in 1940 there were four days lost through work accidents, he quoted from statistics. Strikes and lockouts resulted in 6,500,000 man-days of idleness, or an average of less than one-quarter of a day per worker. Disabling injuries caused the loss of 25,192,000 man-days, or an average of more than one day per worker, he stated.

Production Loss Dramatized

Last year the total production loss through accidents was approximately one and a half billion man-hours, he said. This, if applied to the production of various war implements, would be sufficient to build 15,000 to 18,000 large bombers; 30,000 medium bombers; 15,000 to 90,000 fighters; 112,500 to 225,000 trainer planes (varying with type); 450 submarines; 375 destroyers or 45 battleships, he said.

For the first two months of 1941, Davis cited 200 traffic deaths of defense workers in areas of concentrated defense production; 100 traffic deaths of military personnel not using military vehicles, and 20 deaths in connection with use of military equipment.

Urges Individual Effort

Referring to street safety, Davis said "we need no new laws. We have enough rules and regulations." He urged safety consciousness on the part of individual citizens. "I hope to see the day come when this government will appropriate a sufficient amount of money to add to the personnel of our local police department," he asserted.

The meeting called by the District Advisory Board, AAA, was held at the Mayflower Hotel. The plaque was presented to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen by Edward S. Brashears, acting chairman of the advisory board. Accepting the plaque on the city's behalf, Hazen said:

"I want to call on all citizens to observe the traffic rules and regulations so that next year we may not be third but first in the contest."

For cities over 500,000 Cleveland, Ohio, took first award; Pittsburgh, Pa., second place; Washington, third place, while Boston, Mass., got honorable mention.

Doctor Finds 10% Have Mild Epilepsy

By the United Press

Cleveland, June 6.—Dr. Frederic A. Gibbs, of Boston, told the American Medical Association convention today that "brain wave" tests have led him to believe that 10 per cent of the normal population actually has mild epilepsy without symptoms.

By means of the electroencephalograph, a sensitive instrument for measuring the electrical beat of the brain, Dr. Gibbs said readings were taken which show that about one out of ten persons has an abnormal brain beat very much like that of an epileptic between seizures. Only especially severe disturbances of the brain rhythm are manifested as outright epilepsy, he said at one of the final A. M. A. sessions.

Dr. Gibbs, of the Harvard Medical School staff, predicted increasing use of the electroencephalograph in clinics and hospitals in the future.

Head injuries, which often have legal significance, may be diagnosed by means of the instrument.

This application is especially useful, Dr. Gibbs said, because physicians feel the need for an objective record which can show the extent to which nervous function has been impaired and whether the patient is improving or getting worse.

Diseases of the brain tend to produce definite disturbances in the brain beat, but these appear in the record only when they are in the cortex, or outer layer, the Boston specialist said. Disturbances in the deeper parts of the brain are difficult to detect and impossible to localize.

Once-Famous Chevrolet Dies In Obscurity

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, June 6.—Louis Chevrolet, once one of the greatest of all racing automobile designers and pilots, and builder of the first of millions of cars that bear the Chevrolet name plate, died here today almost a forgotten man. He had been in poor health for several years.

Chevrolet, who boasted that Barney Oldfield was able to beat him only once on the roaring road and then only because the Chevrolet entry broke down, was 62 years old last Christmas Day; he died a tired old man, somewhat embittered at a fate that dropped him to virtual obscurity.

Death, which he escaped on numerous occasions on early-day dirt tracks, came to him today in the modest home here in which he had lived for nearly a decade with his wife and a son. He will be buried Tuesday in Indianapolis where his brother, Gaston, also a noted automobile racer, and another son are buried.

Son of a Farmer

Chevrolet, the son of a farmer, who made watches as a side line, was born in Switzerland and worked as an apprentice in a bicycle shop in his youth. He came to the United States shortly after his twentieth birthday to represent a French automobile manufacturing company.

It was as a substitute driver that Chevrolet entered a race at Sheepshead Bay, N. Y. on May 20, 1905, set a mile record of 52.8 seconds and beat the great Barney Oldfield for the first time.

He built many racing cars after that race, winning numerous trophies.

In 1911, Chevrolet, in cooperation with William C. Durant, built the first Chevrolet automobile for the retail trade. He dropped out of the company then formed because he thought it had no future.

Cars Twice Speedway Winners

Chevrolet often said he considered his greatest achievement the building of two consecutive Indianapolis speedway winners—in 1920 and 1921. The first of these was driven by his brother Gaston, killed a few months later in a Los Angeles speedway crash, and the second by Tommy Milton.

Chevrolet made several attempts to reestablish himself in business in the late '20s and early '30s, but fortune never smiled upon him again.

Silas E. Moore, Clearing House Aide, Dies at 68

Silas E. Moore, 68, a third-generation native of Washington, died yesterday at his home at 618 B Street Northeast after an illness of more than a year.

For nearly 35 years he had been a bookkeeper in the National Metropolitan Bank and for 20 years assistant manager of the Washington Clearing House, holding both positions simultaneously.

Mr. Moore was a member of the Epworth Methodist Church, where he was secretary of the Sunday school, treasurer of the Missionary Society and a member of the board of stewards.

He leaves his wife, Alice Yingling Moore; one son, Robert W. Moore, both of 618 B Street Northeast; another son, Donald R. Moore, of Cumberland, Md., and two sisters, Mrs. T. A. Jarvis and Mrs. Fred Murray, both of 209 Sixth Street Northeast.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 3 p. m. in the Epworth Methodist Church, Thirteenth and N Streets Northeast. The Rev. C. K. Ray, pastor, will officiate, assisted by the former pastor, the Rev. Harry M. Cantor, of Harrisonburg, Va. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

District Youth Wins Scholarship

Anthony Marmo, 17, of 1523 C Street Southeast, is among the ten youths who will be awarded scholarships offering five years training in mechanical engineering at Carnegie Tech, it was announced yesterday.

Three hundred boys from all over the country competed for the scholarships. Anthony will leave for the school on July 9, it was said.

He distinguished himself in many ways at Eastern High School, from which he graduates this month. He is lieutenant colonel of the high school cadets, has been active in dramatics, debating, and is on the staff of the school paper.

He is also managing editor of "Boy Power," club paper of the Boys Club of Washington, and was first president of the Junior Optimist Club. He won the Optimist oratorical contest last year.

$28,000,000 Asked for Civil Defense in Area

Defense spending estimates totalling more than $28,000,000 to provide new schools, recreation facilities, hospitals, health centers and water and sewer systems in Washington, Virginia and Maryland were submitted to the Senate yesterday.

Disclosure of the estimated need of defense populations in the area came as the Senate Public Buildings and Grounds Committee reported favorably the Lanham defense works bill, already passed by the House. The bill authorizes expenditure of $150,000,000 in communities throughout the Nation.

The expenditures were proposed in tentative estimates of defense needs developed in a Federal Security Agency survey of areas where swift population expansion has resulted from the defense program.

The survey disclosed a need for an estimated $1,872,168 for school construction in Southeast and Southwest Washington, the Senate was told. An additional $100,000 was estimated as required for new recreation facilities in the Capital.

Estimates Listed

Total estimates for Virginia were—Schools, $2,786,087; sewage treatment, $8,570,000; sewage collection, $2,563,000; hospitals, $3,360,000; health centers, $280,000; water supply, $3,724,000; recreation, $1,195,000.

Total estimates for Maryland were—Schools, $510,000; sewage treatment, $1,126,000; sewage collection, $642,000; hospitals at Hagerstown, $120,000; health center at Hagerstown, $35,000; water supply, $868,000; recreation, $335,000.

For Alexandria, Va., $880,000 was estimated as needed for sewage treatment; $132,000 for sewage collection, and $385,000 for additions to the water system. Alexandria's need for water extensions, a $600,000 estimate for hospitals in the Alexandria-Arlington area and $140,000 for a health center in Arlington, Va., were given top priority rating. The estimates also included an item of $22,500 for expansion of the water system in Arlington.

School needs in Virginia and Maryland communities were placed at $509,000 for Fort Belvoir, Va.; $23,250 for Quantico; $385,000 for Arlington Cantonment, Va.; $255,000 for Fort Meade, Md.; $255,000 for the Naval Academy at Annapolis, $345,000 at Indianhead, Md.

Portsmouth Item Largest

Largest single estimate was one of $6,490,000 for sewage treatment facilities at the Navy Yard at Portsmouth, Va., where $1,415,000 also was proposed for sewage collection and $1,010,000 for water system expansion.

Estimates for hospitals included $2,400,000 for expenditure in the Newport News-Norfolk-Portsmouth area. For Laurel, Md., $180,000 was proposed for sewage treatment, $148,000 for water system expansion and $83,000 for sewage collection.

Other items for Indianhead, Md., included $140,000 for water supply; $34,000 for sewage collection, and $60,000 for sewage treatment. A total of $170,000 was proposed for water and sewage at Quantico.

Tipsy Driving Costs Policeman $150

Convicted of driving while drunk by a Police Court jury May 28, Policeman William E. Bracey, 41, of the Twelfth Precinct, was sentenced yesterday to pay a $150 fine or serve 45 days in jail.

Judge John P. McMahon pronounced sentence in the case, which grew out of a collision between Bracey's automobile and a truck at Good Hope and Naylor Roads Southeast, March 4. The officer paid the fine.

Bracey's dismissal from the force was recommended to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendant of police, by a trial board, Wednesday, after the patrolman was found guilty of intoxication and conduct unbecoming an officer.

Foy Sails to Join Hospital in Britain

Harold B. Foy, an accountant, 1705 Corwin Drive, Silver Spring, Md., was among 48 Americans who sailed for England recently as part of the staff of the American Red Cross-Harvard Hospital now under construction there, it was announced yesterday.

The 126-bed hospital, which was prefabricated in this country, is a joint undertaking of the American Red Cross and Harvard University. The project is designed not only to fill an urgent need in England, but also to study the treatment of communicable diseases under wartime conditions. It will include eventually nearly 80 Americans in the staff, it was announced.

Kugel Elected Head Of Antismoke Group

H. K. Kugel, of Washington, was elected president of the Smoke Prevention Association of America yesterday at the closing session of the thirty-fifth annual convention in Atlanta, Ga.

Kugel is chief engineer of the United States Division of Smoke Regulation and Boiler Inspection. Other officers elected were: W. E. E. Koepler, Bluefield, W. Va., first vice president; Cy Paters, Chicago, second vice president, and Frank A. Chambers, Chicago, reelected secretary-treasurer.

Model Father Is Fair, Square And Honest, Boy Tells Post

Washington's ideal father, 13-year-old Dick Fox thinks, is an insurance agent who is 5 feet 5, weighs 126 and is "always fair, square and honest."

He is "quite a comedian and often has my brother and I rolling on the floor with laughter." Besides, continues Dick, he "loves sports and often takes the kids around our way to the park to play football or baseball."

Dick admits he may be biased in favor of his candidate in The Post's quest of the Capital's model dad. That's because he's writing about his own father, Jack J. Fox, 1810 C Street Southeast.

"I think," writes the nominee's admirer, "he can play football better than any other dad of his age. Dad is in his late thirties but is as active as a boy of 20.

"P. S. I hope to hear from you in the near future."

You will, Dick, if your entry happens to be chosen as Washington's model father. Nominations are still being received by letter but they must all be in by Wednesday. The winner will be announced Friday morning, in plenty of time for him to do a mite of pardonable strutting before Father's Day June 15.

Whether he is your dad or someone else's, you may enter a candidate. His children may be infants or grown. The father of one is as eligible as the father of 12.

Address your letter naming and describing your choice to the Father's Day Editor, Washington Post. Write and mail it now. At all events, make sure it is postmarked no later than midnight Tuesday.

5-Year NYA Cost In Virginia Put At $7,408,818

By the Associated Press

The National Youth Administration, since its inception in 1936 and through April 30, 1941, has spent $7,408,818 in Virginia, a report laid before Congress by Representative Flannagan (Democrat), of Virginia, showed yesterday.

The total included $2,507,133 spent on the student work program and $4,901,685 on the out-of-school work program.

The report showed that in April there were 20,305 young people employed in the NYA program in Virginia, including 8,561 boys and 11,744 girls. The out of school work program provided employment for 10,166 and the student work program for 10,139. The student work program included 7,407 in school work and 2,732 in college and graduate work.

A total of 906 institutions were participating in the student work program in Virginia in April, in which students, school, college and graduate, were earning an average of $7.42.

Wheeler Fears U. S. Backs a Loser

Pittsburgh, June 6 (INS).—Senator Burton K. Wheeler yesterday called on American people who, he said, "do not want to back a loser," to face the "hard cold facts" and speak out against intervention in the European war.

The United States cannot force its "four freedoms" upon the world, "at least not in our generation," the Montana Democrat declared in a broadcast address at a rally sponsored by Pittsburgh's America First Committee.

"The American people must speak. They must let the President know—that they expect him to stand by his pledges—that they expect him to continue his resistance to war . . ."

'Reaching for the Sun' Doesn't Quite Make It

The New Screen Feature at the Earle Offers Able Cast Scant Opportunity to Prove Worth; Victor McLaglen Scores Roundly on Stage

"REACHING FOR THE SUN." Paramount picturization of a story by Wessel Smitter, adapted to the screen by W. L. River, costarring Joel McCrea and Ellen Drew, with Eddie Bracken, Albert Dekker, Billy Gilbert, George Chandler, Bodil Ann Rosing, James Burke, Charles D. Brown and Regis Toomey. Directed by William A. Wellman. At the Earle Theater.

IN "REACHING FOR THE SUN," Producer-Director William A. Wellman, usually a reliable craftsman, succeeded in groping no higher than the ground level of fog on a day when the ceiling was zero. Based on a sound dramatic premise, the new picture at the Earle is so cluttered up with unbelievable slapstick comedy devices and so deficient in substantial character drawing as to render it merely a good idea gone abysmally wrong.

BELL

The theme of the story, adapted from a denatured version of Wessel Smitter's novel of "F. O. B. Detroit," might be expressed in some such paraphrase of Kipling as "Wilderness is wilderness and city is city and sometimes the twain shall meet." All of the extravagant developments come about when Russ Elliott, a woodsman from the North, hies him to the city to earn the money to buy an outboard motor that will facilitate his native industry of clam-digging. In Detroit, he gets a job on the production line in a big automobile factory—the Packard plant was used for this background—and manages at the same time to fall in love with and marry a young waitress in a quick-and-mussy lunchroom. He also acquires a pal in the quaint person of Benny Morgan, an old hand on the line, who can only sleep when soothed to rest by the clatter of street cars, the honking of horns, the wail of sirens and the other commotions of a great city. Russ dreams eternally of the woods, the peace, the quiet and the freedom of the pristine forest on the edge of a lake. Rita is on Benny's side. Especially after the baby comes and she has returned to her mother's home, miffed at her husband's shouting. Then Russ engages in that horrendous battle with his rival, waged with a 40-ton crane and a 50-ton manipulator in the heart of the furnace room. The loss of a leg solves all of the Elliott problems and the picture ends, as it opened, in the depths of the wild country.

Yesterday's first audience laughed enormously at frequent intervals during the unspooling of the film. It was impossible to determine whether they were laughing with it or at its impossible exaggerations.

Cast Is Handicapped by Material

Joel McCrea, Ellen Drew and Eddie Bracken, as Russ, Rita and Benny, struggle valiantly to make the most of such implements of entertainment as have been placed in their hands. Their respective characters, however, have been contrived with no regard for believability. The up-and-coming Mr. Bracken has all the best of it by being cast as an amusingly dim-witted young man whose efficiency is never intended to accompany him out of the factory gate. Albert Dekker, as the ostensible villain of the piece, offers a strictly burlesque impersonation of a tough guy who thinks he can fight, but never gets very far toward victory until he calls his mechanical juggernaut into play as a weapon of offense. Bodil Rosing is best of the supporting cast as Rita's understanding mother.

Mr. McLaglen Scores a Hit

The new stage revue at the Earle is headlined to thunders of applause by Victor McLaglen, making his first visit to the Capital in eight years. He was in fine fettle yesterday and scored decisively—with the assistance of an unnamed comedian half his size—in an "act" which he confessed had been tossed together in a couple of hours, they had left the Coast on that short notice. It nevertheless was a pleasant interval of banter, climaxed by an exceedingly brief excerpt from the last scene of "The Informer," the picture that won the mammoth McLaglen the Academy award. First of the specialists on the bill is Margery Daye, an accomplished dancer, who has found it possible to bring distinctive novelty to her acrobatics. Next is Hector and His Pals, our favorite of all dog acts, by reason of its hilarious informality and the sagacity of a stageful of canines of all breeds and sizes that pretend to be untrained. Eileen Ritter steps out in a song in tremendously improved style and the rest is left to the incomparable skill of the Roxyettes. The newsreel pays heed to the passing of the former Kaiser Wilhelm II and tribute to Lou Gehrig.

Two Stars in 'Reaching for the Sun'

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 6 (INS).—These heartless, cruel girl roles cannot come too tough, for Ida Lupino doesn't even object to a nice murder now and then—on the screen I mean. So she's greatly intrigued over Jerry Wald's new story, "The Hard Way," which Hal Wallis selects for her as her next for Warners. The story was an "Of Human Bondage" flavor and covers a span of ten years in the life of a girl—from 16 to 26—from high school to New York fame. She gets to the top the hard way by knocking people down who get in her way. Nice girl!

PARSONS

When Mary Howard, the pretty girl with Robert Taylor in "Billy the Kid," checks in at Twentieth Century-Fox, she goes with the blessing of L. B. Mayer, no less. Mary has been on the M-G-M lot since she was a high school girl and she asked the big boss to be released from her contract because she felt there are so many important femme stars that there wasn't a chance. Her first assignment with T. C. F. is in "Riders of the Purple Sage."

I have never been sold on Steve Fischer's book, "I Wake Up Screaming," for I didn't like its attitude toward Hollywood. I hear, however, the story will be rewritten when Twentieth Century-Fox makes it into a movie. They are now talking with Charles Laughton about playing the leading role, so from that I judge that all that will be left of the Fischer story will be the title and it really is a swell title.

Chatter in Hollywood: Judy Garland is literally up in the air—and this time it's not just because she's in love with Dave Rose. At this moment she is winging toward Chicago via TWA to sing at the unity day mass meeting. The Garland invitation came from the White House, no less. This is the first time Judy has been in a plane and it all happened so suddenly Dave Rose didn't have a chance to arrange her songs, "God Bless America" and "Don't Bite the Hand That's Feeding You." Wendell Willkie and Carl Sandburg will be the principal speakers.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Gene Tierney and her bridegroom, Count Oleg Cassini, drove Gene's mother to the plane and talked things over; Mitzi Green wearing a diamond engagement ring put on by John Erskine, Pasadena socialite. Talk is they'll elope over the weekend; attractive Juliette Novis and that Rembrandt of the makeup world, Perc Westmore, at the Brown Derby. As we told you before they'll marry just as soon as Perc's divorce from Gloria Dickson is final. Gloria too has matrimonial plans and her next bridegroom will be Ralph Murphy, the director.

Harold Lloyd's lovely daughter, Gloria, at a nearby derby table with my favorite man-about-town, Mickey Rooney, and I can promise Harold she was in safe hands for Mickey is really a nice boy; Mrs. Jacob Kleinhaus, Martha Raye's 82-year-old grandmother, arrives by plane over the weekend to celebrate her birthday with Martha. The trip is Martha's birthday gift to her.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, June 6.

Gregg Toland, who's been doing work for years but who had the spotlight turned smack on him for his photography in "Citizen Kane," cracks out with his list of the ten most interesting faces in Hollywood. And he completely overlooks the typical Hollywood cutie.

HOPPER

His list is as follows: Gary Cooper, Gloria Swanson, Ingrid Bergman, Marlene Dietrich, John Qualen, Bette Davis, Ronnie Colman, Freddie March, Frank Morgan and Orson Welles. Now, Gregg has nothing against youth, but if you'll look over the above list, none of these is in the first flush except Welles. And we don't think of him as young. Maybe it's his experience that makes him seem to old. But Gregg's is an adult viewpoint, and interesting to me because most cameramen choose our young beauties who have pretty faces but lack character. And when your judgment matures, it's character that counts . . . Gregg is now doing "The Little Foxes" for Bette Davis.

The more I see of Charlie McCarthy, the more astounded I am that a block of wood can be so human. Bill Caldwell, a former stunt man who looks after Charlie, says he feels like a butcher when changing Charlie's head from one body to another. On the set of "Look Who's Talking," the whimsical sophisticate keeps the whole cast giggling. He talks off the record, becomes as salty as the sea, and his ad libs, when Edgar Bergen blows his lines, are all for the book, but not for the sound track.

Twentieth Century formed a "Buck a Month" Club for their fellow workers in the service. Already 35 of their boys are in camps. Each month they send them packages of cigarettes and whatnots. They already have $700 in the kitty.

Jerome Zerbe, who helped put New York's El Morocco on the map, arrives June 10 to photograph our film beauties for two classy magazines. One reason Zerbe's welcome everywhere, besides being mighty amusing, is that he's never released an unflattering photograph.

Somerset Maugham's back here finishing his novel, and may do a stretch of work for David Selznick. He and a male companion, while waiting for their ladies at a local restaurant, memorized the menu through thick spectacles, after which Maugham carefully put those cheaters away and screwed a monocle in his eye for the rest of the evening. Which reminds me of an Englishman I once saw who, while sun-bathing, wore a dark monocle!

And speaking of Englishmen, Gracie Fields, who's really a very sick girl, is worth a hundred of her fellow countrymen in this country.

Barbara Stanwyck gives no news of herself, but is filled with pride that her 9-year-old son won a prize and blue ribbon at a horse show last week. When she said, "Skipper, I'm so proud of you," he handed her the decorations and made straight for Jeanie Benny, who was his pride and joy that day.

And Susie Tracy, after looking at "Boys Town" with Daddy Spencer, preserved a stubborn silence, but when prodded, remarked, "I thought Bobs Watson was swell, didn't you?"

I had a fan letter the other day from a mother of a 7-year-old, begging me to beg Norman Taurog to remake "Skippy" with Darryl Hickman in the lead. They'd better hurry, 'cause the Dead End Kids already have Darryl under their wings out at Universal. Incidentally, the kid started his career singing and dancing, but so far the screen hasn't allowed him to do either.

Claudette Colbert is singing "For We Sail the Ocean Blue, Our Saucy Ship's a Beauty," since she's rented that sailboat and beach house, and her clothes all have a nautical flavor, too. No, not the six delicious kind.

Robert Sherwood, who has been working with the President during this period of national emergency, has been so engrossed that when S. N. Behrman called to tell him he had won the Pulitzer award for his "There Shall Be No Night," Sherwood said, "Why bother me about such unimportant things?"

By the way, Ruth Selwyn is spending most of her time with members of the Supreme Court in Washington, is in and out of the White House, and has become very palsy-walsy with the President. Well, Ruth always was a clever gal, and has more ideas revolving at once than an electric fan has revolutions. Who knows? By now she may be a dollar-a-year woman!

Metropolitan

"Meet John Doe," the Gary Cooper-Barbara Stanwyck costarring vehicle, reopened yesterday morning at the Metropolitan Theater after an extended run at the Earle.

This is the latest in the Frank Capra group of pictures on the greatness of the "little man." It is one with "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" in that it shows the average man as victorious when faced with the overwhelming force of his less virtuous superiors. Once again Director Capra and Script-Writer Riskin find villainy in newspaper publishers and politicians, but so ingratiating are their virtuous characters that one forgives them for incarnading the devil.

The two personalities are supported by a top-notch cast, headed by Edward Arnold, than whom there is none more skilled in portraying moneyed villainy; Spring Byington, Walter Brennan, Regis Toomey and an appealing young actress, unnamed in the cast credits, who plays the latter's soft-eyed wife.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, June 6.

ON THE WALLS of the London office in which Alfred Duff Cooper performs his duties as Britain's Minister of Information now hangs, framed, a remarkable document. It was presented to him, at his request, by Johannes Steel, the radio commentator who went to London as a special correspondent for Liberty Magazine . . . Steel had left for London, on the same day that Rudolf Hess left Germany to drop by parachute in front of a startled farmer in Scotland—the biggest news story of the year. Steel received a cable from Fulton Oursler, Liberty's editor—and that cable now is framed in Duff Cooper's office . . . it read: "GET EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW HESS. CABLE IMMEDIATELY—OURSLER."

LEONARD LYONS

ERNEST HEMINGWAY went to Washington Wednesday to report to the President about China . . . Alvin J. Wirtz soon will be named by Harold Ickes, to be the deputy administrator in charge of gas and oil . . . Maurice Chevalier, who has a pass permitting him to travel between occupied and unoccupied France, is going to Spain instead—and will make his new movie there . . . The broadcast between Fiorello LaGuardia and Sir Herbert Morrison, Britain's Minister of Home Defense, will take place on June 12 . . . Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice had a dinner party scheduled at his home last night, in honor of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, sr. The guest of honor didn't show up.

ONE OF THE WINNERS of the "Buy Something British" window-display contest was the firm of Abercrombie & Fitch . . . Yesterday, the telephone operator there received a phone call from a Scot, who asked to speak to "Mr. Aberrrcrombie" . . . "Is this Mr. Aberrrcrombie?" asked the Scot. "Well, Mr. Aberrrcrrrrombie, yuhrrr kilt in the frrrront window is on backwarrrds" . . . And so Mr. W. J. Donovan, distinguished president of Abercrombie & Fitch, rushed downstairs immediately, and quickly turned the kilt around.

WILLIAM SAROYAN, whose "Beautiful People" has returned his investment plus a profit, hasn't permitted success to change him. He now writes: "I think I've got the greatest play in the history of the theater coming up—if I don't lose it or if it doesn't turn out to be bad" . . . For the first time in his night club career, Sherman Billingsley will have his Stork Club redone by an interior decorator . . . Jerome Frank, the new Circuit Court of Appeals judge here, has declined an invitation to return to Washington for a new post

WHEN THE ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT company of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" played in Canada recently the Earl of Athlone came to witness the performance. He wanted to meet Woollcott, but couldn't go backstage—because the entire audience rose when he did and waited for him to leave, pursuant to royal custom . . . Woollcott and the company therefore went to the railroad station, where the Earl's private railroad car was stationed. The ladies of the cast bedecked themselves in the gowns and long gloves required for such a regal occasion and curtsied when they were presented . . . Woollcott, however, sat down as soon as he was introduced, while Athlone remained standing. But the Earl was mindful of Alec's recent illness—and quickly seated himself, too.

THE ICKES-GUFFEY candidate for Bituminous Coal Consumers' Counsel is Dr. Luther Harr—city treasurer of Philadelphia, and secretary of the school board there. Both these jobs are salaried ones. To draw a salary under this new Federal post, the oath includes a declaration that the counsel shall have no other business, vocation or employment. And so Harr will compromise by receiving his salary from Philadelphia, and only the title from Washington . . . Clifford Fischer, whose French Casino shows brightened Broadway for so many years, plans to install his newest edition at the premises just vacated by George White's Gay White Way

DIPLOMATS who returned from Lisbon report these two local notes: The Gestapo agents are easily recognizable, despite the fact that they speak English fluently. Their clothes are the give-away in identification—for they dress the way Englishmen have been reputed to dress under all circumstances: tuxedoes, worn at the casinos. The true Britishers, in Lisbon, wear flannels . . . When a Lisbon-to-London traveler is notified that his plane is to leave the next morning, it is important that no news of this flight should leak to the Gestapo. And so the traveler usually makes a dinner date immediately—for the next night—an appointment which he mentions at all the public places . . . and one which he knows he never will keep.

'Christian' Tuneful

Having had heavy drama and light comedy as the basis for its plots in the past, the "Dr. Christian" series starring Jean Hersholt has gone musical in "Melody for Three."

Tribe's Feller Stops A's; Gets Draft Papers

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Found—A Good College Ball Player

Detroit, June 6.—A college sophomore named Dick Wakefield has struck it rich. Big league baseball's frenzy for muscular young men who give the appearance of being able to hit a ball out of the lot is the lode young Wakefield has happened on. He has them bidding for his signature at figures that already reached $30,000 and may go higher.

POVICH

A year ago, Wakefield was an obscure freshman at the University of Michigan working his way through college and startling nobody with his catching for the freshman team. As this week ends he has received offers from nine big league clubs who are tumbling over themselves to sign him.

Wakefield says he's going to chuck his college career and take the dough. He is a very direct young man and says that the team which displays the most money can have him. By this time, he feels that he is a prize catch. He would be a dense young man if he did not. Big league scouts have been shadowing him with checkbooks unfurled for months.

Baseball actually has witnessed nothing like the dither to sign Wakefield. Sums unheard of in previous dealings with college players have been laid at his feet, but the lad is calmly sitting back and awaiting the peak offer. The Detroit Tigers will probably get him. One report has it that Detroit scouts were authorized by Owner Walter O. Briggs to tell Wakefield they would better any other club's offer by $7,500.

The suspicion held by the army of big league scouts is that Wakefield is another Ted Williams in the making. That is the underlying reason, of course, for the all-out frenzy to get his name on a contract. Such as Ted Williams are rare, and Wakefield does, indeed, bear a remarkable resemblance to the Red Sox star in several ways.

Batted .370 at University of Michigan

He's an outfielder now. His Michigan coach, former big league pitcher Ray Fisher, persuaded Wakefield he was no catcher. His chief charm is his batting and in that he threatens to be a carbon copy of the loose-swinging Williams. Like Williams he is a left-hander, tall, turkey-necked and with power in his swing. He can get over the ground in the outfield, and he is supposed to throw well. He hit .370 for Michigan this year and collected nine home runs in 26 games.

One of the reasons that nine big league clubs—six in the American League and three in the National—are willing to unburden themselves of more cash than was ever paid for a college player, is Wakefield's draft status. He's just turned 20. He is the support of a widowed mother and three brothers, and the club that buys him would not find him whisked away for Army duty.

Washington gave him a tryout today. It was probably the most historic tryout of any college ball player. The boy actually was doing the Nats a favor by showing up, what with the richer clubs in the league on his trail. Already he had made engagements to permit the Indians and Yankees to look at him before the week was out. He walked into the Washington dressing room at 2 o'clock, already considerable of a figure despite the fact he had not swung a bat in any sort of organized ball.

In the Washington dressing room, the big fellow's entrance created a stir that was no less than amazing. College kids get-

Denny Shute, Upper Case Competitor

Fort Worth, Tex., June 6.—Win, lose or draw, this man Denny Shute will be remembered in our books as a real uppercase competitor. His opening day 69, which paced a brilliant field of golfers in the United States Open was a dazzling performance for a man whose made-over right wrist had made him a 50-to-1 long shot in the tournament.

CONSIDINE

We walked to the locker room with Shute after he sank the birdie that put him on top of the field. And we asked the freckled, baldish guy with the apologetic grin to let us see the ersatz wrist. He held it up. It has a white 3-inch scar running through the hair along its side.

When the scalpels of Drs. Arthur Weiland and Charles Burbacher made that incision in March of 1940, Shute, who had been British Open and P. G. A. champion, was a 1,000-to-1 shot never to play again. "Funny, eh," he said, as he sat down in front of his locker. "This is the first time I've ever broken 70 in the Open."

He told us that it became apparent that his day was done while playing in the Bing Crosby tournament early in 1940. There he sprained his right wrist badly while making a comparatively simple shot out of the mud. There was no exterior sign of what was going on inside the wrist.

But an X-ray soon found a cyst the size of a silver dollar, gnawing away at the main wrist bone. When at last the thing was operated on by the two Coral Gables surgeons, it was found that the wrist bone was then almost paper thin. In scraping off the cyst, the bone was further weakend, so the resourceful doctors slit the leg of the unconscious golfer, took out a portion of his shin and grafted it into the delicate anatomy of the wrist.

Man-Made Wrist Was Perfect

Shute's 69 was a tribute to those doctors. A golfer's wrist is the most delicate hinge in the sports business, but Denny's 69 would indicate that man in some cases can make a better wrist than nature. The job was so well done that Shute played golf late in July of 1940. It must have been a sweatful milestone in his career—for much of his livelihood depended on what the first test would prove. But he shot nine pars for the first nine holes, and he knew that oblivion was not for him, thanks to the magic of medicine and a piece of his own generous shin.

A thin, nervous man came up to Gene Sarazen in the breakfast room of Gene's hotel the day before the Open opened and in a humble way asked for Gene's autograph. Gene, who is a good-hearted fellow, invited him to sit down. The fellow all but swooned with pride, sat down and drank a cup of coffee, his hand shaking so much that some of the coffee ran down the side of the cup.

"Going out to see 'em play tomorrow?" Gene asked him.

"Naw, I can't make it," the jittery man said casually. "I'll be in England, certainly wish I could, though."

Gene dropped his fork with a clatter.

"England . . .? Is there an England in Texas?"

"Naw, England in England." I ferry Hudson bombers. Now, on that fifth hole out there, what kind of club will you use?"

Sarazen said, "the hell with golf; let's talk about bombers."

"Oh, bombers . . . sure," said the red-hot golf fan. "Three of us are bringing the ships east from the plant on the coast. We'll fly to New York in four and a half hours, then I become an English subject again . . . sign some paper . . . then we go on to New Foundland, get some bullets for our machine guns and a few bombs and take off for the other side . . . Boy, oh, boy, will this autograph burn 'em up, when I flash it on the boys on the other side."

Fireballer Gives 4 Hits, Wins, 2-0

Rapid Robert Fans 11, Running Total For Season to 101; Error Hurts A's

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 6.—Bob Feller proved again today that the Cleveland Indians couldn't get along without him.

He hurled a four-hit, 2-to-0 victory over the onrushing Philadelphia Athletics for his twelfth of the Indians' 31 wins this season.

It was the young strikeout king's fourth triumph since any of his tribal slab mates have won even one—the last non-Feller Cleveland triumph being the 4-2 one Jim Bagby turned in against the St. Louis Browns May 24.

Macks Meet Master

The Indians have skidded sadly since that time, but their closest rivals have done nearly as badly. As a result today's victory pulled Cleveland two games ahead of the losing Chicago White Sox.

Connie Mack's surprising Athletics had won 14 of their last 18 starts, but they met their master today. Rapid Robert not only won his seventh game in succession and his fourth shutout, but struck out 11 men to run his season total to 101, and issued no walks. The only Mackman to reach third base didn't get there until the ninth inning. Feller has been beaten only twice this campaign.

Bill Beckman, bidding for his second win of the season, pitched creditably and limited the Indians to eight hits, but it was his own error in the fifth inning which gave the Redskins an unearned run—all they needed to win.

Indians Sew It Up

Lou Boudreau opened with a single and when Ken Keltner laid down a sacrifice bunt Beckman threw wild to first, allowing Boudreau to reach third and Keltner second. Lou then tallied on an infield out. The Indians nailed the game down in the eighth with their second run, pegged on Jeff Heath's double and Roy Weatherly's single.

Feller Slated For Army Call In Two Months

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 6.—Pitcher Bob Feller's selective service questionnaire was mailed to him today, and there were prospects that he might be called for duty by late August.

Informed that he could expect to receive the document tomorrow, the ace fireballer said, "If I've got to go, I've got to go. Everybody's got to put in their time.

"I won't ask for deferment and only want the same treatment as everybody else."

Major league baseball's leading pitcher has order No. 2,857, having been registered here rather than at his Iowa home. His local board has sent questionnaires to 3,200 of its 3,830 registrants.

It was a matter of speculation as to how soon Feller might be subject to call, but some board officials thought he had a 50-50 chance of being called in the latter part of August.

Asked about the possibility of a call before the end of the season, he said, "That's something that is up to the board."

With the Indians leading the league—his 2-to-0 victory over the Athletes today put them two games ahead of the White Sox—the 22-year-old hurler had no comment on the Indians' prospects should he be summoned for duty.

"It's all the same to me whether they call me at one time or another," he said. Feller admitted he "would like to be in the World Series," but declined to make any predictions as to whether the Indians were headed for a pennant.

"Yes, if I am called—no matter what date—it would keep me out of baseball next year altogether," he continued, "but that is to be expected."

C. C. Slapnicka, vice president of the club, commented, "It would be a blow to see it come before the end of the season, but we must bow to the inevitable. Everybody must do his part for national defense. We won't ask for deferment.

"Bob has no horror of being called or of going. He's really tickled to death at the chance. If we were in the war, he would not have to be drafted, because he would enlist. He is ready at any time.

"He'll be a big loss to us and to the whole American League," said Slapnicka.

Nova Kayoes Robinson in Third Round

By International News Service

Minneapolis, June 6.—Lou Nova, of Oakland, Calif., challenger for the world heavyweight title, tonight knocked out Jim Robinson, of Philadelphia, in the third round of their scheduled ten-round fight.

Nova, his left eye badly cut, opened up on Robinson in the third round and floored the Philadelphian with a right punch to the jaw. Robinson fell against the ropes and pulled himself to his feet at nine.

A crowd of 7,000 fans saw the bout.

Jim actually won the first round by scoring repeatedly with hard rights, and in the second he opened a cut over Nova's left eye. The cut was the deciding factor in arousing Nova. Realizing the danger as the blood dripped down his cheek, Nova fired hooks to Robinson's stomach that slowed up the big Easterner.

Nova didn't waste any time in the third round. He kept on top of Robinson and set him up for the first knockdown against the ropes by forcing Jim to bring down his defense to protect his stomach from the body attack. Robinson was counted out in 1 minute and 17 seconds of the round.

The cut over one eye suffered by Nova will keep him inactive for a couple of weeks, Ray Carlen, his manager said. The two may rest in the northern Minnesota woods during this period, then return to New York, where Nova will start training for his bout with Louis, according to Carlen.

Mrs. Walter Stokes Wins District Title

Manor Club Star Defeats Mrs. Meckley, 2 Up, To Add Another Crown to List; Match Close

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, who decided to take a fling at competitive golf just five years ago this spring, yesterday attained the maximum of local success by adding the District Women's Championship to her Middle Atlantic and Maryland State titles.

The new champion, playing over her home Manor Club course, staged one of her typical back-nine spurts to defeat Mrs. Betty Meckley, a three-time former champion from Kenwood, 2 up.

Thus the new titlist climaxed a fine week of golf which included a qualifying 86, just a shot off the medal pace, an opening-round 3-and-2 victory over Mrs. Charles Lynch and then two extra-hole conquests, over Mrs. T. F. Neblett on the nineteenth and Mrs. Myron Davy on the twentieth.

The Turning Point

Mrs. Stokes produced an 83 brand of golf yesterday and Mrs. Meckley and 85 as the girls enjoyed sunshine for the first time in five days and took advantage of it.

Although the match was very close all the way the fourteenth hole was the real turning point, as it was there Mrs. Stokes took a 1-up lead for the first time, when, for a moment, it looked as though she would go 1 down. Mrs. Meckley had tossed a five iron just that many feet from the pin from well back in the fairway when Mrs. Stokes replied with an approach some 10 feet away, dropped the putt and Mrs. Meckley missed.

Mrs. Stokes made it 2 up on the long fifteenth with a regulation par five as Mrs. Meckley missed the green in three. The latter was short with a 6-foot putt for a win on the sixteenth, but kept the match alive on the seventeenth as

Vander Meer Blanks Phils With One Hit

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 6.—Southpaw Johnny Vander Meer, who hurled two consecutive no-hit games for Cincinnati three years ago, almost turned the trick for the Reds again tonight shutting out the Phillies, 7 to 0, with one scratch hit and striking out 12.

Vander Meer

Danny Litwhiler got the Phils' lone hit in the second inning, beating out an infield tap to Shortstop Eddie Hoost. Altogether Vander Meer permitted only two Phils to reach first base and hurled perfect ball after Litwhiler's safety, retiring 23 men in a row.

Stan Benjamin, who walked in the first inning, was the other Phil to get on base. He was promptly caught trying to steal.

Meanwhile, the Reds knocked Si Johnson out of the box in the third inning by scoring four runs on three hits and three bases on balls to win easily.

Charley Aleno started the Reds' scoring by hitting a homer into the left field stands in the second. In the big third Vander Meer led off with a single. Ernie Koy walked and after Lonnie Frey sacrificed Ival Goodman was purposely walked to load the sacks. Frank McCormick, however, singled to score Vander Meer and Koy. Aleno popped out, but Ernie Lombardi doubled against the right field wall to score Goodman and McCormick.

With two out in the fifth Lombardi singled, banged out another double, this one off relief Pitcher Bill Crouch, to score Aleno from first. The Reds got their last run in the sixth on Koy's single bringing in Joost from second.

Nats Mangle Another Game, Losing, 11-8

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Detroit, June 6.—Don't read this, lest it curdle all your affection for the Nats, if any. Today they truly mangled one. They got themselves licked by the Tigers after holding a 7-0 lead. The Nats' performance was no whiff of springtime in Rockies.

The final score, in case you are interested, was 11 to 8. The Nats took their fourth straight defeat like men—like men who had little business being on a big league ball field.

They butched it generally, but the chief sinner was Ken Chase, who had a 7-0 lead going into the third inning and promptly pitched himself into a 7-7 tie before the inning was over. Collaborating with him were Buddy Lewis and Roger Cramer, whose outfield play in the inning was thrilling—from a Detroit viewpoint.

Pofahl Helps Tigers

Eventually, Shortstop Jimmy Pofahl chipped in with a messy piece of infield play to inspire three Detroit runs in the sixth inning, at a time when the Nats had bravely recaptured an 8-7 lead.

It all added up to the first time the Tigers could beat the Nats this year, after 11 straight lickings that embraced seven in the South and four since the season started.

After Washington staged a six-run record-inning against young Floyd Giebell, who was making his first start since beating Bob Feller

Prove Best Mudders And Close 36 Holes With 144; Scores Of 156 Qualify

By Bob Considine.

Fort Worth, Tex., June 6.—Denny Shute, the man with the shin bone wrist, stayed up on top of the field in the forty-fifth United States Open here today at the Colonial Country Club.

But the ruptured clouds which turned the course into a vast mud pie forced the freckled veteran to share his lead at the half way mark with Lawson Little, the defending champion, Clayton Heafner, a big mudder from North Carolina, and 39-year-old Craig Wood, winner this year of the Masters at Augusta.

All players with scores of 156 or better will tee off tomorrow in the 36-hole finals.

The four leaders emerged, wringing wet and still sizzling from narrow escapes from lightning, out of a day's competition which saw 22 players, including Jimm Demaret and Olin Dutra, drop out of the tournament because of the refusal of U. S. Golf Association officials to postpone the competition for 24 hours. They shared the top spot with scores of 144, four over par for the storm-battered course.

Dark Horse Has Chance

They may be joined in the morning by Johnny Morris, unsung pro from Tuscaloosa, Ala. Morris was stopped at the end of the fifteenth hole by darkness. Par golf the rest of the way will give him a 144 and a tie for the lead when the heavily whittled field plays the final 36 holes of the tournament tomorrow.

Morris was flagged down as an anticlimax to a soggy day which saw many players openly rebellious in the face of the U. S. G. A.'s insistence that they continue playing under conditions so intolerable that the insurance company presented tournament officials with $2,000 for "paid up" rain insurance.

Behind this pace-setting quartet, with 145, were little Paul Runyan and Texas-bred Dick Metz. The fierce elements which turned the 7,035-yard course into a set for a swampland movie, deterred little Paul not a whit. He strung a neat 2-over-par 72 to his 73 of opening day.

Metz Bogs Down, Blows Chance

Metz, on the other hand, was headed for a solo leadership in the tournament when he bogged down in the mire of the back nine and had to be content with a 74 to add to his 71 of the first day.

One shot back, with 146, were Sam Snead, Jug McSpaden, Byron Nelson, Johnny Bulla, who plays with a drug store golf ball, Herman Barron, a 100-to-1 White Plains, N. Y., dark horse, and Henry Ransom, local pro.

Snead bore the brunt of the storm through the last five holes of his round, but scored a 70, the only par of the day. He was two under par when one of the day's worst squalls struck him and turned his ball into

Five District Players Bow From Open

By the Associated Press

Fort Worth, June 6.—All five of the Washington district entrants were eliminated from the final 36 holes of the rain-drenched National Open golf championship today. Only one of them, Cliff Spencer, who led the Nation in sectional qualifying wth a 137, came close. He was one shot too high, with a 77 for 157. The qualifying limit for tomorrow's play was 156.

Disastrous to Spencer was the eighteenth hole, where he took a two-over-par 6. He hooked his drive into trouble, was still in there in two, and finally got on the green in four.

Rut Coffey, of Hagerstown, found the Colonial Club's 3,530-yard back nine too tough, and his 41 for 79 gave him 158. Andy Gibson, on an 85, lost all the ground he gained with his sound 76 yesterday, and Leo Walper, with an 81 for 162, was a stroke higher.

Add Nats' Woes: Al Evans Is Hurt; Early Carries On

Special Dispatch to The Post

Detroit, Mich., June 6.—The Nats catching staff was reduced to one man—Jake Early—today when Catcher Al Evans developed a mysterious leg ailment and was sent back to Washington for treatment.

Evans reported a swelling in his right leg, and Trainer Mike Martin diagnosed the ailment as a ruptured blood vessel, recommending treatment by the Washington club physician. Evans said he was not aware of injuring the leg at any time.

Western Scores Over Eastern, 13-5; Final Game Monday

Tide's 12 Errors Aid Winners; Raiders Collect 14 Hits Off 3 Hurlers

By Bill Burnett

Though the fair name of baseball was somewhat smudged in the process, Western High's nine forced the 1941 interhigh championship series into a third game yesterday when it registered a 13-5 victory over Eastern at the latter's stadium.

The issue will be settled Monday at Anacostia High field when the warring clubs meet at 3:30.

Beaten by a 7-3 count in the first clash of the 3-game title series Tuesday, Western enjoyed all sorts of assistance fro mits opponent yesterday. Among the items checked in by the Tide in an effort to help their cross-city foes were: 12 very legitimate errors, seven bases on balls, a passe dball and a wild pitch.

Raiders Collect 14 Hits

In their own behalf the Raiders registered 14 hits off three Eastern pitchers and limited their misplays to 5.

A critical mishap marked their victory in the fourth inning when the outstanding player of both teams, First Baseman Bob Leach, stepped on the side of his foot taking an easy lob to first after Vernon's grounder. His ankle badly swollen, Leach was forced to leave the game.

For two innings there was every indication things were about to happen, and then they did. Western got men on second and third in the first frame, but saw them expire there. Eastern loaded the bags in the second but went down when the Raiders' starting pitcher, Clarence Kuldell struck out the last man to face him, Don McLaughlin.

The third inning settled matters in Western's favor. Eastern's infield fell apart like a sand castle letting six Raider runs seep home on three hits. Four Tide errors were interspersed in the proceedings, along with four bases on balls. That ended the duties of the Tide's "surprise" pitcher, Art Bray, and brought Ken Deavers into action. Three Westerners got to bat twice in the inning.

Western Scores Five More

Though the hosts had whittled their deficit to 6-3 by the seventh inning, they lost all interest when five more Raiders crossed the plate in that frame, again on just 3 hits. A steady stream of substitutes went into play for the losers in the last two stanzas until a total of 19 players had their names on the scorebook. Deavers was taken out at the start of the eighth to make room for Ches Spieser.

Western's Kuldell took credit for the victory, though he needed help from Charley Hines with two out in the sixth. Hines struck out Bill Foreman to retire the side, and had little trouble until the ninth. Then Eastern reserves bunched three hits for the home team's biggest scoring spree—two runs.

Pirates Beat Giants Twice, Records Fall

By the Associated Press

New York, June 6.—The Pittsburgh Pirates swept a double-header from the New York Giants today on the fine pitching of Max Butcher and Truett (Rip) Sewell.

They won the first game, 5 to 4, with Butcher hurling six-hit ball and took the second session, 4 to 3, behind the five-hit working of Sewell, who tied the major league record for pitchers with 11 assists.

He also had one putout, making him a dozen fielding chances handled cleanly for a new National League record. His three assists in the third inning tied another record and the 21 putouts by First Baseman Elbie Fletcher of the Pirates also tied a league record.

Two of the hits off Sewell were home runs by Mel Ott, bringing the veteran Giant's total to 14 for the year and 402 for his lifetime. Another blow was a pinch triple by Ken O'Dea, which led to New York's third run. The Pirates peppered Bill Lohrman for 11 safeties, including a homer by Frank Gustine.

Mrs. Stokes Wins D. C. Golf Crown

Mrs. Stokes half topped a second shot over the green and took five on the par three.

Mrs. Meckley Concedes

One down on the eighteenth tee, Mrs. Meckley was never in the finishing hole as she hit a short hook off the tee and then scooted two wood shots along the fairway and finally conceded Mrs. Stokes a victory before they holed out.

Mrs. Stokes won the Middle Atlantic championship in 1939, added the Maryland State title last year and yesterday's District triumph gave her the third of this section's major titles, a feat accomplished before only by Mrs. Meckley and Helen Dettweiler. Mrs. Meckley was also runner-up last year in the Middle Atlantic championship.

For the first two holes yesterday it looked as though Mrs. Meckley was going to add a fourth title as she won both with par fours, dropping sizable putts on each as Mrs. Stokes was short and missed putts for halves. The new champion countered with the first of five one-putt greens by winning the fourth and squared the match on five as Mrs. Meckley three-putted, a feat she duplicated on the next hole to go one down in the only really poorly played hole of the match by both.

Mrs. Meckley, who one-putted seven greens, holed a 4-footer at the seventh to square the match but went one down at the turn to a par. Mrs. Stokes failed to get on the green from just off the edge of the tenth and lost the hole, but she scrambled to great halves on the next two holes to set the stage for her winning rally on the fourteenth and fifteenth.

Both made mistakes, Mrs. Stokes' principal trouble coming from erring approach shots while Mrs. Meckley was dissatisfied with her tee shots in general and could not forget the three-putt greens.

Lon Warneke Defeats Braves For Cards, 3-1

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 6.—Lon Warneke notched his sixth victory of the campaign today by letting the Boston Braves down with six hits and one tainted tally to bring the St. Louis Cardinals a 3-1 decision.

In only one inning did the Braves threaten Warneke seriously, but a spectacular play by Martin Marion on Pinch Hitter Paul Waner's belt in the seventh cut down Gene Moore at the plate with what would have bene the tying rally.

Marions' drive just managed to knock down the whistling drive and Moore, heading for the plate, was tagged out cleanly by Gus Mancusco, who was on the receiving end of the shortstop's perfect throw.

Bosox Homers Down Chicago White Sox, 6-3

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 6.—Home runs accounted for all of Boston's tallies today as the Red Sox whipped the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 3, for their sixth straight win and climbed within one game of second place in the American League.

Boston got only six hits off Johnny Rigney and Buck Ross, but three of them were homers and two were doubles. Jimmy Forx collected his eighth circuit smash of the season with two on base in the first inning. Ted Williams goth his tenth with one on in the third and Jim Tabor followed with another in the fourth.

Adam Hats Win Over I. B. M. Softball Team

Adam Hats softball ten, as unpredictable as tomorrow's weather, scored their first win in the Merchants Night League after five consecutive failures last night in Ballston Stadium, but they had to do it the hard way. Pete Mastrodonato and Jack Smith, International Business Machines' two ace hurlers, combined to hold the Hatters hitless, but a pair of wild pitches by Mastrodonato allowed the Hatters to score two runs in the third inning, giving them a 2-to-0 upset win. Gilbert Cake pitched for the winners and allowed I. B. M. five hits, all singles. Billy Dellastatious, former Tech High School star, and Everett Hoagland tallied the runs for Adam in the weird affair.

In the second game of the twin bill another upset was recorded when Johnny Poston's Manhattan Auto and Radio ten edged Plaza Wine and Liquor, 11 to 10, in a wild game. Bobby Poston's single with the bases filled in the seventh inning accounted for Manhattan's margin of victory.

O'Donnell's Beaten, 14-4

Heurich and O'Donnell's nines took their Washington Post-Industrial League rivalry to Griffith Stadium yesterday for the benefit of the "Night of Thrills" program for the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, and the teams' first meeting in the second half proved much the same as first-half engagements.

Heurich, first-half titlist and defending champion, smashed the Grillmen by a 14-4 count behind the eight-hit hurling of big Ed Colliflower.

2 Teams Tie for Medal In Bannockburn Play

Jankowski's Fine Recovery Shot Helps Him And Shanley to Tie Whittlesey, Skinker at 68

John Jankowski, the Central High football coach, tossed a 20-yard approach shot within inches of the pin on the 18th hole to enable him and his partner, George Shanley, a prominent Rochester, N. Y., amateur, to tie Earle Skinner and Merrell Whittlesey for medal honors in the Bannockburn Invitation Tournament yesterday.

A total of 47 tandems teed off in the second annual two-man team tournament and two rounds of match play are scheduled today in the championship and second and third flights.

Jankowski and Shanley played fine partners in the medal-tying 68, made possible by the former's perfect birdie on the par 5 finishing hole. Skinker and Whittlesey had turned in a 68 a few minutes before when the former dropped a 30-foot birdie putt on the next t olast hole. Skinner, playing with his face taped as a result of walking into a taxicab on Tuesday, played well with an approximate individual 72 and he received four shots help from his partner.

Three Teams Tie at 69

Three teams were bunched with 69s, Ralph Mogart, D. C. amateur champion and Maury Fitzgerald, on the winning team here last year; Bobby Brownell and Henry Russell, a hard-to-beat combination fresh from a victorious season with the Duke golf team and E. R. Ferguson, jr., and William Samford of the host club. Bogart, playing the back nine first, started his round with an eagle three.

Martin F. McCarthy and George Miller, who won the medal here in the first tournament after a triple playoff, were safely in the championship flight with an even par 70, including a 3-under par back 9 of 32, lowest of the day. The crack team from the host club, Billy Houghton and George Molloy, posted a 70 as did the Janssen brothers, of Charlottesville, Va.

Scores of 74 or better made the first flight, Charley Malone, the pro gridder, and Dick Melvin, Indian Spring, just hitting that figure with an out 9 of 34 and back 9 of 40 while that score was matched by Tony Martino and David Ross.

Barely Make It

Ray Swearingen and Ray Burgdorf slipped in under the wire with a 73 when the former finished with three consecutive birdies after hitting the sixteenth tee 6 over par as a team.

The only casualty among the better golfers was the failure of Freddie Bolton, who was Fitzgerald's winning partner last year, and Karl Corby, of Columbia, to make the grade. They had 77.

Willie Herbert Triumphs Over Miss Decker in Net Tourney

Margo Lee Is Upset by Mary Belin

Mrs. Herbert Meets Mrs. Belin Today For Championship At Army-Navy Club

By Jack Munhall

Emerging from a succession of upsets which rocked the heretofore even tenure of the City of Washington women's tennis tournament, petite Willie O'Steen Herbert yesterday placed herself in a commanding position to gain her first title in this event at Army Navy Country Club.

The former District champion polished off Charlotte Decker, 6—2, 6—2 in singles and then teamed with her victim to stage a fine comeback and win a semifinals doubles test from Frances Sturtevant and Jane Wilmerding, 4—6, 7—5, 6—2. The winners fought off four match points in the second set.

Miss Lee Upset

Meantime Defending Champion Margo Lee dropped out of the singles in a stunning surprise when third-seeded Mary Cootes Belin overcame a deficit of 0—6 and 2—4 to triumph in three sets. After she pulled out the second set, 7—5, Mrs. Belin closed strongly with a 6—2 decision in the decisive session.

Mrs. Belin's luck did not hold good in the doubles, however, and she in turn was an upset victim. Top-seeded Mrs. Belin and Frances Rowan were roundly trounced by unseeded Sara Moore and Eleanor Fishburn, 6—3, 6—1. For Miss Moore this victory came as a balm for her tough three-set loss to Mrs. Belin in the singles quarter-finals.

So today at Army and Navy it will be Mrs. Herbert vs. Mrs. Belin for the singles championship at 2:30, and Mrs. Herbert and Miss Decker vs. Mrs. Fishburn and Miss Moore for the doubles crown about 4 p. m.

In the doubles Mrs. Herbert and Miss Decker, teamed for the first time, came about as close to being eliminated as possible before they finally won out. Mrs. Sturtevant and Mrs. Wilmerding, finalists in this tournament last year and a steady if unspectacular combination, had them down one set and 5-3, 40-0 in the second. Again in the ninth game Mrs. Wilmerding and Mrs. Sturtevant were at match point with the score 40-30, but each time the eventual victors steadied and won needed points, sometimes after thrilling rallies.

Yesterday's Results

SINGLES (semifinals)—Mary Cootes Belin (3) defeated Margo Lee (1), 0—6, 7—5, 6—2; Willie O'Steen Herbert (2), defeated Charlotte Decker (4), 6—2, 6—2.

DOUBLES (semifinals)—Sara Moore and Eleanor Fishburn defeated Mary Cootes Belin and Frances Rowan (1), 6—3, 6—1; Willie O'Steen Herbert and Charlotte Decker (2) defeated Frances Carter Sturtevant and Jane Wilmerding, 4—6, 7—5, 6—2.

Today's Pairings

SINGLES (finals)—2:30, Willie O'Steen Herbert (2) vs. Mary Cootes Belin (3).

DOUBLES (finals)—4:00, Willie O'Steen Herbert and Carlotte Decker (2) vs. Sara Moore and Eleanor Fishburn.

Harris Leads Indiana to Track Title

By International News Service

Milwaukee, June 6.—Paced by Archie Harris, champion weight man, and Campbell Kane, distance runner, Indiana's Big Ten championship squad swept to an easy victory tonight in the sixteenth Central Collegiate Track Meet at Marquette Stadium.

The Hoosiers registered 42 points, with Notre Dame trailing in second place with 28½. Wisconsin was third with 23 2-3; Marquette fourth, with 14 2-3, and Michigan State fifth, with 13 2-3.

Harris, powerful Hoosier Negro, who won the shot-put and discus events, was the only record breaker of the meet. He tossed the discus 173 feet and 7⅛ inches to better his own Central mark of 163 feet 8¾ inches. It was the third time this year that Harris has smashed the American collegiate record of 173 feet set by Kenneth Carpenter, of Southern California in 1936.

Campbell Kane, Hoosier runner, won the John P. Nicholson Memorial trophy as the best performer of the meet. Kane placed first in the mile and half mile and was a member of the winning Indiana one-mile relay team.

The complete standings:

Indiana 42, Notre Dame 28½, Wisconsin 23 2-3, Marquette 14 2-3, Michigan State 13 2-3, Michigan Normal 13, Oklahoma 11½, Alabama State Teacher's 10, Butler 8, Navy 8, Northern Illinois Teachers 7, Western Michigan Teachers 6 1-6, Miami (O) 6, Oklahoma City University 5, Illinois 5, Ashland (O) College 5, Minnesota 5, Pittsburgh 5, Xavier (New Orleans) 4½, Loyola (Chicago) 4, Chicago 3 1-3, Prairie View (Texas) 3, North Central 3, Milkaukee Teachers 2½, Grinnell 2, Bradley Tech 1-6, Western Illinois Teachers 1-6, Lawrence 1-6.

Mathias, of D. C., One of 8 Champs Crowned at Ft. Meade

Col. Markey Plans Far-Reaching Program of Fistic Instruction

By Al Hailey
Post Staff Writer

Fort George G. Meade, Md., June 6.—Eight champions were crowned here tonight as the finals of the Twenty-ninth Division boxing championships were run off, but if a plan instituted today by the 115th Infantry takes hold the new champs are going to lead a busy life.

Shortly before some 4,000 soldiers of the Tweny-ninth turned out on the post gymnasium grounds to see the fight finals, Col. D. John Markey, commander of the 115th Infantry, announced a far-reaching program of boxing instruction that is expected to include every man in the regiment.

Although Col. Markey's regiment is the first to take up the sport that prepares a man so well for handling a bayonet, other outfits in the Twenty-ninth probably will follow suit from the looks of the enthusiastic gathering which turned out tonight.

Tonight's card included six three-round fights, but it took only three to decide titles.

Bob Mathias, sergeant in the 121st Engineers, Washington National Guard unit, stole the show by slamming Private Eugene Dumborsky, of the 115th Infantry, through the ropes into the laps of a quartet of officers and then knocking him out in two rounds. Mathias, former Washington Post employe, won the 160-pound title.

The championship fights, marking the end of an elimination tournament, were staged under Athletic Amateur Union rules.

Under the plan instituted by Col. Markey's 115th, four enlisted men with boxing experience will teach the rudiments of the game to the regiment as a group and individually. A call for volunteers for individual classes today brought 149 responses. Col. Markey also said that a regimental team will be organized and will compete with other Army units.

"We hope that every man in the regiment will learn at least the basic movements and positions in the art of self-defense," Col. Markey said. "In addition to the general value of some knowledge of boxing, it is of special importance to the soldier, both in building up his self-confidence and ability to handle himself and, more especially, in aiding him in bayonet drill."

Mathias, District of Columbia Golden Gloves 147-pound champion in 1937, floored Dumborsky three times during his bout, and Dumborsky was unable to come out for the third.

Fred Aguirre, well known Virginia amateur fighter, now in the 176th Infantry, won the 118-pound championship with a technical knockout over W. Fitzgerald, of the 110th Field Artillery, in 55 seconds of the second round.

Tom Birmingham, former University of Maryland star and holder of the Southern Conference 126-pound title in 1937, was crowned 135-pound champion when his opponent failed to show up. Birmingham is now in the 110th Field Artillery.

Other champions crowned without a fight included Leo Stoll, 110th, heavyweight; W. Sellers, 116th Infantry, flyweight; D. Weber, 116th, featherweight. W. Brown won the 147-pound final, and Leroy Wade took on W. Hubble in the 175-pound title bout.

In an exhibition bout, in the 160-pound class, Brooks Bowen, Headquarters Company of the 176th Infantry and R. Kanary of Company A, 176th Infantry, fought to a draw in three rounds marked by hard accurate punching. Both are from Richmond.

Booher, Powell Hurler, Pitches No-Hit Game

Pitcher Bennett Booher, of the 98-4 softball team of Powell Junior High School, pitched a no-hit contest yesterday, but his opponents, the All-Stars, managed to get four runs as Booher's club won, 9-4.

Booher struck out 17 of the 21 batsmen who faced him and walked three.

Sewell Fires Ex-Teammate In First Move

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 6.—Coach Johnny Bassler was released today by the St. Louis Browns in the first change made by the new manager, Luke Sewell, who was Bassler's former teammate.

Bassler and Sewell were fellow coaches at Cleveland under Oscar Vitt last year. Bassler was released by the Indians in a change of managers, but Sewell remained with Cleveland. He was named manager of the Browns to succeed Fred Haney Wednesday.

MacMitchell Beats Mehl

By the Associated Press

Compton, Calif., June 6.—Leslie MacMitchell, of New York University, conquered Walter Mehl, of Wisconsin, and two of the best distance men in the Far West tonight in the featured 1,500-meter race of the annual Compton track and field meet.

MacMitchell, breaking the meet record of 3 minutes 57.8 seconds set by Indiana's Don Lash in 1938, sprinted over the finish line 15 feet in front of Mehl in 3 minutes 51.4 seconds. Leroy Weed, of Southern California, was third, and Dick Peter, of California, last. Mehl came from fourth to beat out Weed in the last 200 meters.

Hurricane Hal Davis set off the meet with a flash by qualifying in the 100-meter dash with the fast time of 10.3 seconds—one-tenth of a second shy of tying the world record held by Jesse Owens.

62 Entries to Open City Net Play Today

Lacking three of the old standbys but including a couple of strong newcomers, the field for the City of Washington men's tennis tournament opening today at Edgemoor appears a bit stronger than usual.

There are 62 entries—one of the largest fields in years—topped by District Champion Barney Welsh and Don Leavens, the formidable newcomer who has been beating Welsh and other local leaders consistently in exhibitions. Leavens was seeded second, a surprising honor inasmuch as this will be his first competitive showing in the vicinity.

With Alphonse Smith, the third-ranking Washington player, and als oLieuts. Bill Howard and Jimmy Farrin not entered in the event, the Virginia star, who is making a strong comeback. Channing, who reportedly licked Welsh and Dick Murphy in one afternoon recently on Barney's backyard courts, drew the eighth favored spot.

Following Welsh and Leavans in the seedings are in order such familiar figures as Davie Johnsen, Murphy, Hugh Lynch, Frank Shore and Ralph (Buddy) Adair, No. 7.

Unseeded but expected to stir up a mess of trouble are newcomers, Bill Godfrey, of the Navy tennis team, and Eddie Miller, highly rated freshman prospect at the University of Maryland.

Georgetown, George Washington and Maryland each will have at least one varsity representative in the tournament. The Terps will present four contestants in Doyle Royal, Griff Baugher, Phil Burkom and Eli Gottlieb, and the Hoyas and Colonials will send their respective No. 1 players, Don Martin and Johnsen.

1 o'clock—De Witt Smith vs. Sam Minkoff, Jimmy Hardey vs. Jim Heiskell, Don Leavens vs. Hershel Harris, Austin Rice vs. Reggie Copper, Bill Godfrey vs. Tom Wedden.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 6.—Jockey Willie Dufford returned to action today, following a ten-day suspension, and gave one of his best saddle exhibitions. The stocky little fellow booted High Bud, owned and trained by John Bosley, jr., to the wire in time to take a nose victory over R. C. Waple's Hi-Blaze. L. M. Torreyson's Westing was third and a length behind the thrilling battle for first money. A field of six competed in the sprint of four and one-half furlongs.

With Hi-Blaze the favorite, High Bud brought his backers an $8.20 mutuel. Fair weather prevailed for the first time in a week, but the track was drying out and as sticky and holding as flypaper. High Bud was clocked in 0:53 1-5 and shared top weight of 118 pounds with Hi-Blaze.

Hi-Blaze Takes Lead

Hi-Blaze began as if it was going to be "no contest." Jockey Buddy Root stepped him into a length advantage over High Bud and Westing. Entering the straightaway, Hi-Blaze began to weaken slightly. Root shook him up. High Bud, after swinging wide into the stretch, answered Dufford's urging. Hi-Blaze was slowing and High Bud was coming at the wire.

E. A. Nicodemus' Mowmet won his third straight race of the meeting and his career by surviving a photo finish in the opening event. Jockey Willie Kelly barely held the son of Mowlee together long enough to withstand a closing rush staged by John Allgeyer's Jimjofor. Third money went to Petes Gold. Mowmet was a $4.20 favorite.

A pair of sixes accounted for the daily double which brought a $33.40 pay off. The Cedar Hill Farm's Mike's Grace won the second race, defeating, among others, Chief Hollis and Quick Vine. The 5-year-old mare paid $10.80. J. V. Stewart's Silver Beam made it two victories in as many starts here by winning the third race at a $7 mutuel. Jockey Root kept the filly on the beam and she had Schley Goree and Transday closest to her at the end.

Dufford Scores Again

Jockey Dufford rode another winner on the card, taking the fifth race with Schley Al, owned by R. A. Bowman, jr., the colt leading Goantell and Paradise Girl to the wire. Schley Al paid $3.40.

Dufford suffered cuts to his left knee while in the starting gate aboard Russell McGee in the seventh race. He was forced to cancel his mount in the eighth event. The seventh was won in easy fashion by America First, paying $10.80.

MOWMET forged to the front in the run to the turn, drew clear, but had to be kept to severe pressure to barely stave off JIMJOFOR. The latter saved ground early, came out and was waiting down the winner at the end. PETE'S GOLD was off slowly and closed with good energy. SUN MAKER was not a serious factor.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:07½. Off at 3:07½. Winner, Cedar Hill Farm's ch. m. MIKE'S GRACE was hustled into the lead, drew out gradually and was kept to a drive to the end while opening a good lead. CHIEF HOLLIS was hard ridden while closest to the pacemaker and closed willingly. QUICK VINE lost ground early and showed a good effort. LENA GIRL went evenly and could not reach serious contention.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:36½. Off at 3:37. Winner, J. V. Stewart's gr. f. ALICE DODGE shook off CAT'S CRADLE to take command, opened up a good lead and was kept to a drive to the end. CLOCKS worked his way to contention on the outside, moved up menacingly and was held safe through the stretch run. CHIEF CHEROKEE, slow to begin, came wide for racing room and closed willingly. CAT'S CRADLE forced the early pace and weakened.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Distance horses will have their innings in today's feature event. A field of 10 has been named overnight for the West Virginia Handicap and the route is a mile and a quarter. Despite the fact that Track Superintendent Henry Erickson and a bright sun were trying hard to improve the track yesterday and promise to be out again this morning, the oval will be on the slow side. In the feature J. Hal and Groucher's Boy have excellent opportunities to overhaul Mrs. Mary Kneriem's Red Wrack for the honor of leading gleaner at the meeting. Red Wrack, new hors de combat because of a bruised near forefoot, is top man among the earners, with $1,400 to his credit. Going into the handicap, J. Hal and Groucher's Boy are tied in the earnings department, each with $1,075. The winner's portion of today's feature purse will be $700. Aside from J. Hal and Groucher's Boy, the horses Belle D'Amour, Bargain Boy, Transday and Tyr are winners at the meeting. Hot Man, 4-year-old chestnut gelded son of Constitution and Hot Griddle, has been second in each of his two outings, and among the sharper students of form he is looked upon as the horse to whip. Some observers point out that he will be ridden by Sammy Palumbo, leading rider at the meeting, and, therefore may be expected to show improvement. In view of J. Hal's two successive victories, it is not improbable that he will be sent postward the choice of the day. The 4-year-old chestnut son of Mate and Parley is top weight under 119 pounds, and may find his package a bit too much for him. However, it is widely agreed that Racing Secretary-Handicapper Fred Burton has done a first class job in weighting the horses, and that his imposts bring the contestants so close together that the business of finding the winner before he reaches the wire is going to be extremely tough. With the return of warm weather, Clerk of Scales "Snooks" Winters, Charles Town's Mr. Esquire, can be counted on to come forth with a stunning outfit today. He will be on exhibition after each race at the judges' stand steps. It is reported that he wore out five catalogues selecting this regalia. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—LADY BUCK, if taken off the reserve list, might awaken to take the major portion of this purse. She likes the route and is rounding into form. ACE OF TRUMPS has good early speed and is dangerous. ODDREE for the show end. LIKELY LAD would be a factor but a doubtful starter.

Second race—IDA TIME is tossed in this with 100 pounds and the rail position. She has the speed to beat this gang to the first turn and I'm going to string along. SETTLER turned in a bang-up second last out. HAPPY MIRACLE downs this kind occasionally.

Third race—JEAN C. gets in light and has plenty of front running ability. She may not stop at this distance. PRINCESS LADY, despite her habit of getting in the way, is a threat. EMMA and DIN are good now but may be overweighted.

Fourth race—COCKLEBUR knocked at the door recently and should improve off that race to take this purse. STAR CANTER'S last was a fine try. The Bennings Stable starts MAETAKE. This one has been away for some time but is dangerous.

Fifth race—We have to string along with J. HAL. The Wapleowned star is at tops and seems capable of carrying the 118 pounds. ANNIKIN will have to come from behind and belongs close. Feather weight will give BELLE D'AMOUR a chance.

Sixth race—LULA KHAYYAM seems to have found a perfect spot in this abbreviated sprint. She has little to fear among the eligibles but MY FIRST, HAPPY HOSTESS and ROVING EYE will be keen contenders if taken off the reserve list.

Seventh race—GARDEN POOL gets the call in this purse event. Has been brought along gradually and has the punch necessary.. GINOBI is a hard knocking plater and belongs close. GLITTER GIRL is in light.

Eighth race—TWO ACES, a doubtful starter, will come through with a closing drive that ought to take this purse, providing he can see again. JUSTA JIMMIE'S last can be thrown out. TROSTAR is always close up.

Best bet—LULA KHAYYAM.

Interest Rate Cut Urged as Defense Aid

Crisis Demands New Precedents, Palmer Tells D. C. Bankers at Parley

By S. Oliver Goodman
The Post Financial Editor.

Hot Springs, Va., June 6.—"Precedents no longer count in a world amok."

With that blunt rejoinder, Charles F. Palmer, coordinator of defense housing, called today on the banking fraternity to forget a part of its traditional conservatism and wade into the all-out defense effort. He spoke at the second day of a three-day annual convention here of the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

PALMER

Defense housing is a field where bankers "can do their dollar's worth," he asserted, voicing a plea for immediate financial aid regardless of profit or possible risk.

"Rightfully," he told the more than 200 assembled bankers, "you purpose to keep capital busy at decent rates of hire. But the job of capital is bigger than that. The job is to make sure that capital . . . does all it should during this great test of our democracy, instead of running away, sulking in the corner or being a downright cry-baby as it was in 1933 and 1934 and has continued to be in greater or lesser degree ever since . . ."

Baukhage Also Talks

BAUKHAGE

Cut-throat competition faces American democracy, according to Hilmar Robert Baukhage, radio commentator and writer, who also addressed the bankers here this afternoon.

"By fair means or foul," said Mr. Baukhage, "this competition is attempting to wipe American products from the face of the earth. Two major tasks are ahead," he said, "selling and reselling democracy!"

America, Mr. Baukhage said, has been forced to take over some of the dictators' own weapons during the emergency, but when the moment arrives for beating swords into plowshares this Nation must see that foreign weapons also go into the scrap heap.

The first reason, therefore, to "resell" democracy, the commentator declared, is to keep the people from forgetting the normal processes of representative Government temporarily laid aside. No businessman maintains his sales if promotion stops, Mr. Baukhage added, and belief in democracy must be renewed with each generation, else another product will push it off the market.

Ever since 1776 when America "invented a better mousetrap" and freedom loving people beat a path to its door, the American way of life has had imitators, he asserted, but not until now had it been threatened with a substitute.

Must Watch Liberties

He compared the declaration of the national emergency with a man nailing a board over a broken window in a storm to protect his home until the hurricane was over, and cautioned that the Nation must not grow so accusomed to darkness that when the time came it could not let the sunlight in again.

Mr. Baukhage said the public must be convinced that its liberties must be watched with eternal vigilance, "which has ever been their price."

Specifically, Mr. Palmer advocated lower interest rates and longer term loans. He declared that ½ per cent (interest rates) and 40 years (credit term) will give the building business a prosperity that will spread far and wide in other lines of business."

Turning to bankers' complaints of Government competition in the credit field, Mr. Palmer said:

"Instead of lending money at one-half of 1 per cent to the Government to be used for 3 per cent loans to business, why not let business have it for 2½ per cent and freeze the Government out of the market?"

Bold Action Needed

The times call for bold and courageous action, he told the Washington bankers. "You would gain nothing by hanging onto a comfortable, conservative position . . . if as a result you should find yourselves trying to do business in a Nazi world order.

"In the past, as you know, bankers and their clients in the real estate business have had the habit of demanding a quick turnover. In other words, you were not afraid to lend money for real estate developments, provided most of it could be quickly drawn out again by selling the property to home owners or private investors. Long term investment in real estate had a bad name, largely because of the unhappy experiences of the years after 1928.

Timidity Assailed

"The chief trouble with this timid attitude of safety first was the same in business that it has been in the efforts of the democracies to meet the Nazi aggression.

"Now you have the same thing to meet in connection with defense. By taking larger risks you can improve our chances of an early and satisfactory peace. And the sooner we get a successful ending to this war, the greater will be the safety of all our investments . . ."

Golf and horseshoe pitching this afternoon were followed by the three vice presidents' reception, dinner and dancing in the evening.

Officers will be chosen at the concluding session tomorrow.

Rush to Buy Is Reported Unequaled in Retail History

New York, June 6.—Retail trade this week continued at a volume close to the near-record levels of previous weeks, the Dun & Bradstreet weekly business survey reported today.

"In many centers," said the review, "the rush to buy automobiles, electrical appliances and other home furnishings was at a pace unequaled in history.

"Sales comparisons with dollar trade volume in 1940 held to a margin of 16 to 20 per cent, although the sales curve at this time a year ago was beginning to point upward after spottiness during May.

"Gains widened somewhat in the Southern area where the increase over last year was estimated at 18 to 24 per cent for the South and 15 to 25 for the Southwest. New England again scored one of the best comparisons, with an average increase of 20 to 23 per cent.

"East and Middle West were above the year-ago level by 15 to 20 per cent, Northwest by 12 to 16 per cent and Pacific Coast by 17 to 23 per cent.

"Wholesale trading maintained a brisk pace as retailers continued their efforts to build substantial advance stocks for fall."

Far Eastern Commodities Move Higher

By the Associated Press

Heavily favored by commodity buyers yesterday were various import items, the future supplies of which are arousing concern in consumer circles because of shipping shortages.

A buying flurry developed in the usually quiet straits tin futures market, raising prices nearly ½ cent a pound. Other Far Eastern staples in which demand apparently outstripped supply were silk, up 2 to 3½ cents a pound, and rubber, up .05 to .25 of a cent.

Some additional New York markets swung higher on fresh buying prompted by the post-holiday advance in the face of recent warnings of Federal authorities against excessive speculation.

Santos coffee futures closed up .06 to .19 of a cent; cottonseed oil, up .01 to .13 of a cent; hides, up .09 to .15 of a cent. Cotton contracts for future delivery ended unchanged to .25 cents bale higher. Wool tops and sugar were mixed.

Chicago wheat pushed up 1¼ to 1⅝ cents a bushel after announcement of Government loan rates which gave new wheat a collateral value about 34 cents a bushel above that tendered on the 1940 crop. Corn closed ⅝ to ¾ cent ahead.

Cash markets also reflected considerable urgent covering. The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples rose to 85.75 per cent of the 1926 average, a new three-year high and compared with 85.30 per cent Thursday.

The announcement added that arrangements were pending for sale to the Govrenment of a third and larger Ford unit—an assembly plant at Seattle, Wash.

Skaggs Quits Safeway Stores Chairmanship

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, June 6.—Safeway Stores announced today the resignation of M. B. Skaggs, founder and chairman of the board of the huge grocery chain.

Skaggs bought a small grocery business in American Falls, Idaho, in 1915. Successful in that venture, he bought another in a nearby town.

That string enlarged until, evolving through several systems and mergers, it totaled more than 3,700 stores before the shift in policy to fewer and larger stores with parking areas for customers.

Skaggs asked to be relieved to give his full time to personal affairs. No successor was chosen, but W. L. Harrison, head of the fruit and vegetable buying division, was made a director.

Safeway, operating stores in Western States, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, is negotiating with Daniel Reeves, Inc., operators of a large grocery chain in the New York metropolitan area, looking to a merger. If the deal is consummated, the Reeves stores would become a part of the Safeway chain.

U. S. Hoists Wheat Loan Rate to 98c

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday a schedule of rates—said to average about 98 cents a bushel—at which it would make loans to farmers on this year's wheat crop.

The loan program was established under recently approved legislation designed to support market prices of the basic crops—cotton, wheat, corn, rice and tobacco—at 85 per cent of parity.

A similar program last year provided wheat loans at 58 per cent of parity.

(Parity is a term used to describe prices which would give farm products as much purchasing power as they had in the pre-World War period 1909-14.)

Formula Provided

The schedule set up base loan rates for the principal bread-grain markets and a formula for determining rates on grain which might be stored under loan elsewhere, either on the farm or in smaller markets or country elevators.

Rates at the terminals were higher than those which would prevail elsewhere. They are designed to reflect the normal price relationships which take into account transportation and handling costs in moving wheat from the farm to the big markets.

All growers who complied with 1941 AAA acreage allotments for wheat will be eligible for wheat loans. Farmers who overplanted their allotments will be eligible for loans at 60 per cent of the prevailing rate on wheat produced on their excess acreage. The loans, which will be callable on demand, will be made up to December 31, and will fall due April 30, 1912.

Rates For Other Grains

Interest will be at three per cent.

Simultaneous with the wheat loan announcement, the department made known it would make loans on rye and barley produced in 1941. The rates on rye will be 35 cents a bushel less than the rates apulicable for No. 2 hard winter wheat, or 50 cents, whichever is lower. Barley rates were set at 45 cents a bushel for No. 1, 44 cents for No. 2, 42 cents for No. 3 and 39 cents for No. 4, with a discount of two cents for mixed barley.

Work to Begin On $12,000,000 Chemical Plant

By the Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., June 6.—The Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana today announced it would begin construction immediately on a large synthetic rubber and chemical project at its Baton Rouge refinery.

The announcement of the project, which is to involve the expenditure of from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 during the next 15 months, was made by M. J. Rathbone, president of the company, following a conference with Gov. Sam Jones at which details affecting the State and company jointly were worked out.

One group of plants will produce various solvents and alcohols, another group of plants will produce the recently announced new type of synthetic rubber developed in the Standard Oil laboratories, and a third part of the project calls for more than doubling the present capacity of the Standard's synthetic buna rubber plant, and still another part of the project will produce various raw materials for the solvents, alcohol and synthetic rubber manufacture.

A $3,000,000 buna rubber plant was recently put in operation by the company here. This plant, the announcement says, will be more than doubled in size, while a new plant for the manufacture of the newly developed butyl rubber plant is also to be built.

Gov. Jones announced that the State had approved a ten-year property tax exemption for the new plant.

Drowsy Stock List Drifts Slightly Lower; Jones & Laughlin Issues Stage Sharp Climb

New York, June 6.—Stock leaders slipped by minute fractions today in hesitant, small dealings. Here and there a few issues loomed as gainers but their presence was noted mainly because of their rarity.

The Associated Press index of 60 selected stocks fell for the first time in five sessions, dropping .1 of a point to 40.2. Transactions totaled only 327,570 shares, compared with 604,550 yesterday.

During the last hour some interest was aroused on the drowsy floor of the exchange by a sudden climb of 6¼ points by Jones & Laughlin Steel preferred. The company's common stock rose 2⅜ in the Curb. Operators heard rumors the Independent Steelmaker might soon pay accumulated preferred dividends of $47, opening the way to common stock payments.

President Roosevelt's quashing of rumors concerning European peace plans and a nonaggression pact with Japan had no effect on market prices or the rate of trade.

The sole new industrial prospects inclined to affect quotations were OPM requests for more steel and electric power outyuts and the Ward's reports estimate that the automobile industry was working at the highest production rate of the year.

Among the few issues on the upside were Sperry, International Nickel, Owens-Illinois, Texas Corporation and Continental Banking preferred. The last gaining a point, made a new 1941 high. Inclined lower were U. S. Steel, Montgomery Ward, Douglas, duPont, American Smelting, American Telephone, Santa Fe and Fajardo Sugar, the last reaching a new 1941 low.

In the Curb, where turnover was 79,000 against 122000 yesterday, gainers included Elgin National Watch, Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea, Sherwin Williams and U. S. Graphite.

Except for a few isolated cases of strength the domestic bond market drifted lower today.

Trading tapered off still further, however, to $4,713,800, par value, indicating, brokers said most transactions were of a routine nature and the market had nothing in the way of real liquidation overhanging.

Of special interest in investment quarters was the public offering of $13,000,000 Southern Natural Gas Co 3¼s at 103 and interest. The underwriting syndicate said there was a wide demand for the bonds and at one time the issue went to a point premium over the offering price in over the counter dealings.

Coming on top of Thursday's oversubscription to several stock offerings made after the close of the Stock Exchange, investment circles wondered if the reception accorded the Southern Natural Gas bonds would hasten public offering of several large issues that have been awaiting favorable conditions for public offering.

Commercial Mackay income 4s moved up 1½ points in late afternoon trading to 44⅜ on a fair turnover. Holders of the bonds today approved the sale by a subsidiary of its holdings of stock in the Federal Telegraph Co. to International Telephone for $300,000 cash and $900,000 in securities. Others ending the day up a shade included Columbia Gas & Electric 5s and Standard Oil (N. J.) 2¾s.

U. S. Governments developed firmness on both the Stock Exchange and over the counter when buying interest broadened in the afternoon. The new taxable issues proved popular mediums to some investing houses that have been disposing of the high-priced tax exempts. Some Treasury loans added ¼ point or more in both markets.

Men's Woolen Wear Market Sold Out Six Months Ahead

New York, June 6 (AP).—The Wool Associates of the New York Stock Exchange announced the current tight situation in the men's woolen wear field would continue for some time because most plants were sold ahead six months or more and could not take on new business.

The expectation was, the announcement stated, that the Army and Navy would come into the market for additional supplies in the near future, adding:

"Indications are that the situation will not be relieved to any extent as long as the war lasts. The trade now takes it for granted that the armed services will be substantially enlarged over the next four months. This, of course, will result in large-scale orders for wool goods."

Airline Traffic In May Reported Best on Record

New York, June 6 (AP).—The country's air transportation systems carried more pasengers in May than any month since records have been kept. Good weather and the unusually heavy Memorial Day traffic materially aided the airlines.

On the basis of reports of the major carriers that account for more than 90 per cent of air traffic, it was estimated that all air carriers flew 17½ per cent more revenue passenger miles in May than in April and about 34 per cent more than in the comparable 1940 month.

Emphasizing the record was the fact that new high figures were established three to five months earlier than the annual traffic peak in previous years.

S. S. Rothwell Heads State Building Ass'n

Roanoke, Va., June 6 (AP).—Stuart S. Rothwell, of Charlottesville, was elevated to the presidency of the Virginia Savings Building and Loan Association at its annual meeting yesterday.

The new president succeeds William C. Stuart, of Newport News. S. W. Lyons, jr., of Norfolk, was elevated to first vice president; Danbridge Murrell, of Lynchburg, to second vice president; and John F. Bethune, of East Falls Church, was elected third vice president. Mrs. Anne Forman Ellis, of Norfolk, was reelected secretary-treasurer.

Fermon S. Cannon, of Indianapolis, Ind., first vice president of the National Association, said that building and loan associations must accept the inevitability of Government direction during the developing emergency.

Alabama Steel Output Cut; Pig Iron Lacking

Birmingham, Ala., June 6 (AP).—Lack of pig iron, which has been a constant bottleneck in Alabama since the defense program stepped up production almost a year ago, forced the State's steel output down to 90 per cent of capacity today.

No curtailment was reported in finishing plants manufacturing plates, bars and certain wire products. The demand remained especially heavy.

Week's Auto Output Reaches 1941 Peak

Detroit, June 6 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc., estimated today that passenger car and truck production for the current week would total 133,645 units, highest week's volume of 1941. Last week's output was 106,395, curtailed somewhat by the holiday-shortened work period. A year ago at this time 95,560 vehicles were completed.

Steel Leaders Start Survey Of Expansion

By the Associated Press

New York, June 6.—Important steel executives were en route today to big mills all over the country to consult with their technical experts after meetings here yesterday at which, it was reliably reported, the industry had fairly well made up its mind to go along with a request of Washington defense authorities to embark on the biggest expansion program in history.

The request of the Office of Production Management for a billion-dollar, 10,000,000-ton boost in the country's annual steel making capacity, steel men here said, had posed a host of practical problems which would require wide surveys by top executives of the individual steel concerns, in cooperation with their engineers and production experts.

Conferences Pushed

But, as one important steel man said, "Speed is of the essence," and the conferences with production men were expected to be pushed as quickly as possible.

As soon as possible, it is expected, perhaps within the next two or three days, members of the iron and steel industries defense committee, defense cooperation body of the steel business, will go to Washington to report on the result of their study of the practical aspect of the Government's request for more steel-making capacity.

Meanwhile the reported resignation of Ernest T. Weir, and withdrawal of National Steel Corporation, of which he is chairman, from the American Iron and Steel Institute, top trade body of the industry, remained a subject of gossip among steel men.

Weir May Disagree

Weir's reported resignation, coming in the midst of yesterday's deliberations on the vexed question of the need for more steel mills, had given rise to surmises that he may have disagreed with the expected final decision of most companies to build whatever plants the defense authorities believe required.

The willingness of the Government to supply whatever funds are needed for the giant building program, it was said, had apparently won most steel men over to the idea, despite a widespread feeling that more capacity would be a headache after the defense emergency had passed.

Both at the office of the institute and of the National Steel Corporation there was "no comment" on the rumor of Weir's resignation. Weir's office said he had "left town and we do not know where to reach him."

OPM Allots Orders

Meanwhile it was learned today the Office of Production Management has allocated orders for 460,000 tons of steel among an undisclosed number of companies in the industry.

The orders, for material for cruisers, submarine chasers, mine sweepers, cargo ships, and for tin plate for Great Britain, were the first handled by the OPM under a new policy of allocation of steel orders designed to expedite deliveries.

The allocation was made yesterday after consultation with representatives of the industry, officials said.

Under the new policy it was said that firms holding defense contracts and having difficulty in obttaining steel might apply to the OPM. It will endeavor to distribute the orders among steel companies in the best possible manner to obtain quick deliveries.

Weir Resignation Confirmed

Pittsburgh, June 6 (AP).—A spokesman for the National Steel Corporation today confirmed a report that the corporation had withdrawn as a member of the American Steel and Iron Institute and National Steel's chairman, Ernest T. Weir, had resigned as an institute director.

The spokesman said the firm had no comment on the action. steel sources, however, expressed belief the resignation grew out of differences between Weir, a former institute president, and other members over wages and prices. Only a few weeks ago, National Steel took the lead in granting a 10 cents an hour wage increase while the United States Steel Corporation was negotiating with representatives of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee on wages.

Other members of the institute earlier had expressed opposition to such a rise, claiming it would start prices spiraling and possibly induce inflationary trends.

Cottrelle Sees Oil Price Control

Toronto, June 6 (Canadian Press).—G. R. Cottrelle, federal oil controller, said today on his return to Toronto from Washington where he conferred with the United States Secretary of the Interior, Harold Ickes, that he was convinced that some form of price control would be introduced.

"What form price control will take I am not prepared to say," he said. "The whole matter is an exceedingly difficult one and is concentrated in our inability to provide transportation. That inability arises from the fact that the United States has loaned one-fifth of its tanker fleet to Great Britain and the whole of our transportation is now out of balance."

Pullman to Retire 517,298 Shares

Chicago, June 6 (AP).—Pullman, Inc., announced today that it has accepted for purchase 517,298 shares of capital stock offered by stockholders at $29 a share in response to a recent call for tenders.

Offers were received for 874,451 shares, exceeding the number the company said it would buy. Purchases were prorated according to the amount of stock tendered by each stockholder, the company said.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 6 (AP).—Wheat futures prices gained almost two cents a bushel after announcement of Government loan rates today but closed 18 cents or more below the valuation fixed on new grain at Chicago for collateral purposes.

The rates, averaging around 98 cents a bushel on the farm and $1.16 for No. 2 hard and red here, were in line with trade belief that new wheat would be worth as collateral approximately 34 cents more than the 1940 crop. A car of No. 2 hard sold in the spot market at 99¾ cents, 18¾ higher than the 1940 loan rate but 15¼ below the 1941 rate.

Receipt of heavy, unwanted rains in the Southwest, with prospects of more moisture the next few days, and support credited to mills were additional bullish factors.

Wheat futures closed 1¼@1⅝ cents higher than yesterday at virtually the best levels of the day, with July 98⅞@99, September 1.00⅛@1.00¼. Corn finished ⅝@¾ up, July 73⅝@73½, September 75@74⅞. Oats ⅛ off to ⅛ up, Soybeans 1½@2⅝ higher. Rye ⅝@2⅛ up and lard 5@10 higher.

Four responsible gentlemen talk among themselves and at the same time to the Nation at large, over WJSV and the Columbia network at 6 tonight, on a problem that's pretty sure to interest every one.

It's the question "Should the Draft Age Be Reduced?" The program is CBS's "The People's Platform." The speakers are Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, acting director of the Selective Service Board; Milo J. Warner, national commander of the American Legion; Col. Roy Dickenson, who's president of the advertising trade journal, Printer's Ink, and Newbold Morris, president of the New York City Council, and at the moment acting Mayor of New York City, while Mayor LaGuardia is on a lecture tour of the country in connection with the civilian mobilization for national defense.

The four gentlemen are to meet in CBS's private dining room about an hour before the broadcast. They are to be served a very fine dinner at a table which harbors concealed microphones. They are then to start their informal discussions on the subject and be well into it when, from another room and unknown to the speakers, the program is to be introduced to its nationwide audience.

There are no clocks in the dining room and the speakers are asked to keep their watches in their pockets. Unless they have a keen sense of time or are good guessers they don't know exactly when they are "on the air." It makes for more informal discussion.

5 Shotgun Bandits Swoop on Brewery; Flee With $50,000

Minneapolis, June 6 (AP).—Frank Kiewel, advertising manager of the Minneapolis Brewery Company, said five men, armed with sawed-off shotguns, entered the brewery about 11:30 a. m. today, wounded an employe and escaped with cash estimated at $50,000.

James Christiansen, 24, a salesman, was shot in the back, Kiewel said, "when he didn't move fast enough." His condition was not considered to be serious. The money had been brought into the brewery from a bank.

Contract Bridge

Learning to bid slams is the post-graduate work of contract, but it is obvious to the most obtuse player that he can never learn to bid skillfully to the highest declarations unless he plays six or seven occasionally.

Most bridge fans bid too few rather than too many slams. A slam made but not bid is the subject for today's discussion. A. F. writes:

"Your judgment of the following situations will be very much appreciated. South, the dealer, opens with one spade; West bids two diamonds. North holds:

♠ Q 10 8 5
♡ K Q 10 9 8 4
◇ None
♣ K 6 4

"What should North bid?

"The actual bidding was:

South	West	North	East
4 ♠	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

South held:

♠ K J 9 7 4
♡ A J 6
♣ A 8 5 3

"What should North bid?

"The actual bidding was:

"South held:

"With whom lay the responsibility for missing the practically lay-down slam? I feel sure you will corroborate my version, but then I'm always wrong! You have heard that before."

North might have bid better, but he could hardly have bid stronger. Certainly he used all his lung-power to push the hand to a slam. South was the timid one. He must have felt awfully blue to pass his partner's second slam invitation of five spades; the first was the overcall of three diamonds, the adversaries' suit.

There are many ways of advising players to reach a small slam, some direct, some indirect, subtle or plain, with finesse or without, but the best way is just to bid it. And when a slam bid is successfully made there are few who will question the method of reaching it.

North could have made it easier for his partner by showing his heart suit; South could have at once been assured of a fit, though he should have inferred it, and he might feel more enthusiastic about a six bid.

Justice Rutledge Says Judges Have Too Much Sentence Power

The average criminal court judge is an "absolute monarch" in determining the punishment of convicted criminals, said Associate Justice Wiley Rutledge, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, yesterday at the final spring meeting of the Corrections Committee of the Council of Social Agencies at the Y. W. C. A.

In most cases, the justice declared, the trial judge has only the vaguest contact with the criminal on which to base the severity of the sentence. This, he said, is a serious legal flaw, and should be corrected. The jurist's powers, he feels, should be simply to determine guilt or innocence. The right to impose sentences and to determine their severity, Justice Rutledge said, should be turned over to those who could study every angle of the criminal's past life and background, and specify the fairest penal treatment.

The best example of just treatment of criminals that Judge Rutledge could recall yesterday was the system used in the German republic, where persons found guilty of a crime were sent to a receiving institution, their cases studied and classified, and punishments meted out that varied from near freedom to life imprisonment, depending on the legal character of the crime and the individual's personal history.

Another opinion offered by Justice Rutledge was that today's criminal lawyers are not, as a general rule, the finest in the legal profession. This situation exists today largely because of overabundance of poorly trained lawyers. This will gradually be corrected, he believes, through rising standards of legal education and the subsequent decrease in numbers and improvement in quality of lawyers.

Another legal imperfection, Judge Rutledge said, is the tendency to sentence criminals to satisfy public vengeance. When a particularly heinous crime, like the Leopold-Loeb or Lindbergh case, is committed, the criminal is very apt to suffer a harsher fate than he deserves, solely to satisfy the aroused indigation of the community. It was a "marvel of advocacy," the justice said, that Clarence Darrow, in the Leopold-Loeb case, could "stand between the community and the criminals, and persuade the judge not to send the murderers to the chair, even though the outraged public demanded it."

Justice Rutledge urged closer cooperation between the legal profession and social workers, for the betterment of justice and decrease of crime. He condemned the management of parole boards generally, though he defended their principles. The boards, he said, should be corrected rather than abolished.

Two to Get Honorary Degrees At Georgetown Graduation

With commencement activities starting today at Georgetown University, it was announced that the university would confer honorary degrees at next Monday's graduation exercises upon the Most Rev. Thomas A. Emmet, S. J., vicar apostolic of Jamaica, and Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming.

Feature event of the opening program is the alumni dinner tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Mayflower Hotel, combining Varsity "G" awards, at which former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, will be one of the honor guests.

Senator O'Mahoney, LL. B. '20, will make the principal address at the dinner which will be attended by about 800 alumni, some coming from the Pacific Coast. Bishop Emmet, who was formerly a faculty director of athletics at Georgetown, will pronounce the invocation and the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president, will speak.

Tonight's dinner was arranged by the Washington Alumni Council in honor of the 600 Georgetown alumni known to be in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps or on special emergency duties. Dr. James S. Ruby, jr., executive secretary, estimated that a great many more than that number are actually in the service.

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, '22, will be toastmaster and the varsity awards to Georgetown's best known athletic teams in many years will be made by Thomas A. Cantwell, '08. Keech is chairman of the local council.

At the dinner, Brig. Gen. Leigh C. Fairbank, '12, will represent the Army, Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimtiz the Navy, and Brig. Gen. E. A. Ostermann the Marine Corps.

At 9 a. m. today, the Rev. John J. Kehoe, S. J. will celebrate mass in Dahlgren Chapel for deceased alumni. It will be followed at 10:30 o'clock by the annual meeting of the alumni association.

Last night the Georgetown Law School held its senior class day exercises so that law alumni, the largest single group of alumni in Washington, might be free to attend the Mayflower dinner.

A set of legal volumes was presented to the law school library on behalf of the two sections of the senior class by George Daniel Bruch. Dean George E. Hamilton accepted the gift for the faculty and the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent, made the concluding address.

The class valedictory was given by Joseph Myers Dawson, of Washington and the bachelor's oration by Lewis R. Donelson 3d. Francis X. McDonough, president of the morning section presided at the exercises at which the class history was given by Edwin H. Somers and Daniel K. Moore and the prophecies by Edward E. Syocker and Charles C. Byron.

First USO Service Men's Club Opens Here Today

The United Service Organization's drive for funds will bear fruit today, less than a week after it was launched, with the opening of a service men's lounge and leisure-time club at 606 E Street Northwest.

The club, founded by the Salvation Army, one of the six U. S. O. participants, will be officially opened at 3 p. m. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox will be the principal speaker and master of ceremonies. The United States Navy Band Orchestra will play.

Meanwhile, U. S. O. headquarters announced formation of a new unit in the local drive for $250,000 to provide soldiers, sailors and marines with recreation facilities.

The unit, covering the 14,000 employes of the District Government, is headed by Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, appointed by the Commissioners.

He will be assisted by 18 departmental vice chairmen and about 50 key men to supervise the collection work of about 300 solicitors.

Kreisler, Recovering, Plays His Violin

New York, June 6 (INS).—Fritz Kreisler is recovering rapidly from the injuries he received in an accident on April 26—and he proved it today by playing his violin.

The beloved composer and violinist walked a few steps for the first time since a truck knocked him down and fractured his skull, then called for a violin and played a few bars of the Mendelssohn Concerto.

"He will play, as always," said his wife, Harriett.
